Figures on Births and Deaths Are Sometimes
Misleading

WE HAVE before us a bulletin issued by the department of commerce, bureau of the census, Washington, D. C.

In the bulletin a table of births and deaths are given. The birth rate in Glendale in 1922 was 26.9 and the death rate 23.9 per thousand of population.

At the time this pamphlet reached us, we took exception to the figures on this death rate as given for Glendale, because out of 527 cities in the registration area only 13 cities had a higher death rate than ours.

We were certain that there was some explanation for these figures, because Glendale has always been noted for her healthy surroundings. This is evidenced by the large number of sanitariums and rest homes located here.

IN AN editorial covering this government pamphlet, written on July 5, we mentioned that a government hospital for ex-service men was located here had a great deal to do with the high death rate and also that the large number of sanitariums located here also had a bearing. A sanitarium is maintained for the benefit of those who are not well and while a large percentage are undoubtedly benefited through the means of a sanitarium, a certain percentage of the patients fail to respond and die while here.

AFTER WRITING the editorial referred to above, we took the matter up with our city health officer, Dr. Kaemmerling, and he has furnished us with a table which not only substantiates our theory but goes much farther. The table which our health department furnished shows that Glendale, instead of standing nearly at the top in mortality is among the lowest.

IN THE GOVERNMENT bulletin, a total of 405 deaths for the year is given with an estimated population at that time of 16,950 the rate figures 23.9. According to our own health department figures, 255 of these deaths were of non-residents. By deducting these deaths of non-residents, it leaves only 154 deaths for the year, or nine-tenths of one per cent. Some difference between the figures.

THIS SOUNDS pretty good, but on looking further into the matter we find that out of the 154 deaths, about 42 per cent of them were of persons 65 years of age and over.

THIS is certainly a wonderful record and shows beyond argument that ours is not only the fastest growing city in the United States but also the most healthy one.

PLAN RELAXING OF MARTIAL LAW IN OKLAHOMA

Klan Still Active, However, Kidnaping Witnesses

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 29 (United Press).—Relaxing of martial law in Oklahoma was planned today by Governor J. C. Walton.

Some troops which have been on duty here have already been demobilized.

The military court here, while examining witnesses, is reported to have about reached the limit of its probe.

The governor plans to keep the troops on duty until Tuesday, when arguments will be heard in district court here on whether the legislature has the right to assemble without a call from the executive and when the state election to vote on an initiative law permitting the legislature to meet for impeachment purposes will be held.

Governor Walton's efforts to prevent the election were defeated in two decisions by the supreme court holding that the vote would be legal.

Troops were sent into portions of Payne county today to enforce strict martial law following complaints to the governor of lax law enforcement.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 29.—Six persons missing from Tulsa county following their appearance before Governor J. C. Walton's military commission to relate their experiences at the hands of masked bandits are being sought by troop detachments in four counties today, Captain E. A. Wallis personal aide to Adjutant General B. H. Markham, announced at military headquarters.

Captain Wallis arrived from Oklahoma City at 10 a. m. Searching squads are in Wagoner, Okmulgee, Creek and Tulsa counties, he said. Three men and three women regarded as important witnesses in scheduled court actions growing out of informations filed by the military have disappeared from their homes since appearing before the martial board of inquiry, Captain Wallis declared.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 29. (United Press).—Two more star witnesses for the state, Leonard and Floyd Cook—who informed against alleged rioters here, are missing today. Eugene Goolsby and his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Spain Goolsby, were absent at the trial of those charged with their whipping a short time ago.

Aldrich Blake's first chapter of the "Story of Tulsa" dealt with the alleged whipping of the Cook brothers in which Blake portrayed the "villainous assault in the dark hours of the night, the shooting out of the lights, and a premature birth" as the results of the terrorists' raid.

"You Cook boys had better vacate here at once; we have been here," a warning note to the star witnesses read.

The Cook boys left last night, their father said today. Carroll L. Joyce has been appointed by Governor Walton as a special prosecutor against alleged flaggers here. Joyce is an avowed enemy of the Ku Klux Klan, having been an organizer of an anti-K. K. organization here.

MAYOR AND DAVIS CONFER WITH L. A. CITY ENGINEER

Mayor Robinson and Councilman Davis of Glendale are in Los Angeles today for the purpose of conferring with Engineer Knowlton of that city in connection with the proposed sewer connection between Glendale and that city. The aim of the Glendale councilmen is to push the preparation of the estimate of the sewer, which work is being done by the Los Angeles engineering department as rapidly as possible, so that the sewer bond election may be called at the earliest possible moment.

AUTO STOLEN FROM HOME

An automobile, belonging to C. H. Van Nordenheim, 513 South Columbus, was stolen from his home at about 8:45 o'clock Friday night and has not yet been recovered.

SCOTS PLAN FOR INITIATION AND BIG CIRCUS

Scots to the number of 150 assembled for the regular meeting of the Glendale Pyramid in Odd Fellows' hall Friday night and plans were made for the installation of officers-elect next Friday evening in the Glendale Press hall. This meeting will be open to all Scots and their families and to all Masons and families. An entertainment will supplement the installation ceremonies.

Plans were also discussed for the big Scot circus to be held the last week in October. It is to be a great affair, held under canvas, for five days. Exact dates will be announced later. Its object is the raising of money to finance the Scot band.

Delegates were elected for the state convention at San Diego November 15, 16 and 17. In addition to Toparch-elect Harry Bennett, Scots Moody, Kinley and Murdy were chosen.

CITY CLERK WILL RETAIN EAGLE ROCK OFFICE

Sherrill B. Osborne Intercedes in Behalf Eagle Rock Residents

Through the intercession of Sherrill B. Osborne, former mayor of Eagle Rock, the city of Los Angeles has decided to maintain the office of city clerk in Eagle Rock. For a time the city officials considered dispensing with the office, but Mr. Osborne pointed out that the office was a distinct convenience to the residents here, and it was finally decided that the office is to remain.

Donnell Montgomery, secretary of the Eagle Rock Chamber of Commerce, is to fill the position of deputy city clerk for Eagle Rock as well as that of secretary. Resigned as previously and it is thought probable that the department will continue to issue electrical permits.

B. B. Martosoff, who has been filling this position since annexation, has purchased business interests in Van Nuys and is leaving the office entirely here.

Rio Honors Memory of Auto Victims

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 29.—A special Memorial Day for the victims of automobile accidents was celebrated in this city recently with such popular interest and support that very probably it will become an annual event.

The idea of an automobile victims' memorial day grew out of a proposal, probably made by some way to celebrate a "chauffeurs' day" in homage to the powerful labor organization which protects the interests of the automobile drivers. Out of the large number of automobile accidents, with their toll of killed and maimed, the automobile drivers, as a class, are not beloved by the people. The public protest that was immediately and loudly raised was organized into a day of homage to the auto drivers' victims.

Mass for the souls of the automobile victims was celebrated in the church of Sao Francisco de Paulo, one of the largest temples in this city, and the crowd which attended, consisting for the most part of relatives and friends of those who had been killed by automobiles, filled the great building to overflowing.

Wreaths of flowers were spread on the graves of automobile victims and other flowers were placed on some of the "death corners" of streets where automobile accidents have been frequent.

TO MOVE COURT UNITS AND SUBDIVIDE PROPERTY

J. W. Usilton reports the closing of an option this morning by which he acquires property at the southeast corner of Wilson and Maryland at present occupied as a bungalow court. He plans to eventually remove these buildings to another lot he owns and subdivide the property into small lots which will be placed upon the market in the near future.

MIDWEST RAIN AND WIND STORMS CLAIM DEATH TOLL, MILLIONS PROPERTY LOSS

Most of Destruction Wrought Was in Omaha, Neb., Where Second Heaviest Rainfall Known Was Recorded, and Council Bluffs, Iowa

TWELVE PERSONS PERISHED IN ONE HOME

This Heavy Death Loss Was in Louisville, Nebraska, Where the Twelve Were Imprisoned in House While Trying to Rescue Another

OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 29. (By Associated Press).—Toll of the dead in the heavy rain and windstorms that visited parts of Nebraska and western Iowa yesterday and last night reached 19 today.

The 19th death reported was that of Otto J. Dudek, a traveling man of York, Nebr., who was drowned when he slipped into a hole while trying to cross a flooded creek near that city.

At Council Bluffs, Iowa, the death list stood at five. The heaviest toll was taken at Louisville, Nebr., where a cloud-burst swept away three houses, in one of which 12 persons perished.

All these were trapped in the home of Robert McCarver, 30, who was bed-ridden from burns received Thursday while trying to rescue his mother when she was fatally burned in an oil explosion while trying to start a fire in a stove. They were William McCarver, son of Mrs. McCarver, his wife and two stepdaughters aged 6 and 8; Alfred Laird, his wife and three-year-old son; Robert McCarver and Mrs. L. Smith of Morrison, Ill.

In Omaha the next to the heaviest rain falling in the city's history, 6.78 inches for the 24 hour period ending at 2:40 a. m., flooded streets and caused some property damage, the amount of which, however, could not be estimated accurately. The greatest rainfall was in August, 1903, when 7.03 inches fell. A circus tent here was shot full of holes to prevent the canvas, heavy from rain, from falling on about 3,000 persons. Efforts to give the exhibition were abandoned. A tornado struck near Ashland, Nebr., last night, wrecked several dwelling houses and damaged others, but there was no loss of life and no one was injured.

Train service into Louisville was suspended and property damage estimated at $100,000.

In Council Bluffs, however, the greatest amount of property damage was reported, estimates placing the figure at $500,000. Business men found it necessary to dig mud from the doorways of their establishments today so they could open for business this morning. In the south and southeast parts an area 30 miles long and 2 miles wide was under water and numerous houses were flooded.

[By Associated Press]
COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Sept. 29.—Boats from a nearby lake were requisitioned by an order of city officials today to transport families narrowed by flood waters as a result of last night's torrential rains. It was estimated that 100 families were isolated by the water.

Several score persons, it was estimated, suffered minor hurts in the tornado, but only four or five were known to have been badly injured.

[By Associated Press]
OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 29.—Industrial plants along the Missouri river here were flooded today as a result of last night's heavy rain, which was accompanied by a powerful electrical display. Electric light current was curtailed for a time. Large wholesale establishments in the jobbing district had water in the basements and similar conditions prevailed in all other parts of the city. Water flooded the municipal light plant in the night but operations were resumed this morning.

Estimates of Dead Vary From 20 to 80; Probable Figure 30

[By Associated Press]
CASPER, Wyo., Sept. 29.—Flood waters of Cole creek with its unknown number of dead from Thursday's plunge of Burlington train No. 30, began rapidly receding at 3:30 a. m. today.

Wrecking crews, after an all-night vigil, got equipment ready and began search for bodies about 6:30 a. m. Waters were receding almost as fast as they had risen, although a steady drizzle and snow was still coming down.

Clouds began to break at 6 a. m. in Casper and weather forecast for the district was for clearing skies.

Figures on the number of dead are as greatly at variance as when the first wild tales of disaster were carried to Casper. They range from 20 reported by railway companies to 70 and 80, declared by some passengers to have lost their lives. With the waters going down as at present, it is probable a reasonable estimate may be made by noon today of those who perished. It is not believed likely the complete death list will run above 30 and the estimate of from 20 to 25 carried yesterday may prove accurate.

Cars lie buried deeper than ever in the quicksand bed of the creek this morning. Dredging will have to be done around the coaches before rescue crews can enter in search of bodies.

Latest unofficial figures from the scene of the disaster gave 33 rescued and 21 missing.

BURGLAR ENTERS EAGLE ROCK CHURCH

Two Doors Forced Open and Marks Upon Desk; Nothing Missing

That a burglar had attempted to rob the Eagle Rock Presbyterian church at some time between 9:30 last night and 9 o'clock this morning, is the report given the police this morning by Mrs. Lela Leech, formerly teacher in the Daily Vacation Bible School of the church.

Mrs. Leech, upon discovering that two doors had been forced open, called the police. Officer Bradley made an investigation and found that a sharp instrument of some description had been used to force the doors open. There were also marks upon the desk showing where the burglar had attempted to open it.

The burglar had evidently been frightened from the scene of his work before accomplishing his object for as far as could be ascertained, nothing had been taken. The officer's report states that to all appearances, it was the work of a boy.

MOSCOW SOVIET BACK OF REVOLT IN BULGARIA?

SOFIA, Sept. 29.—Documents found on communist prisoners taken in the capture of Ferdinandova afford undeniable proof, says a government statement that the rebellion was organized and executed with the active assistance of the Moscow soviet.

A locomotive which fell into the hands of government troops of Berkowitza was adorned with large pictures of Lenin and Trotsky. The legend, "Bulgarian State Railways" had been erased and "Soviet Republic of Bulgaria" substituted.

The bodies of 209 communists were found inside the Berkowitza lines after the place had been stormed by the state troops. Six hundred rebels were captured.

Fire Threatens Flintridge, Oak Glen

[By Associated Press]
PASADENA, Cal., Sept. 29, 2:20 p. m.—Swept by a brisk northwest wind, a fire which started several hundred yards south of Devil's Gate dam this afternoon threatened to jump the ridge into the aristocratic Flintridge section. At 2:30 o'clock all the reserves of the Pasadena fire department were called out and fire fighters from Flintridge, the Edison Electric company and the city of Pasadena were thrown along the roads leading to Flintridge and Oak Grove Park to stay the flames which had already licked several hundred acres on the Linda Vista hills to the north and west of Devil's Gate dam. This fire approached very close to the Sycamore canyon section of Glendale.

At 2 p. m. the fire had been brought under complete control, and members agreed to pool their interests and unite in the letting of a contract for five foot cement walks to run from Glendale avenue to the east city limits.

Money for incidental expenses was called for in Methodist fashion and over $40 was showered over the railing on to the secretary-treasurer's desk.

The association adjourned to meet again the evening of Friday, October 12, at the city hall.

Just Chatter

By J. J. M.

She was very small and dainty and sweet and young, not over five or six, with gay laughing eyes and bright golden curls tumbling below her shoulders. And she came tripping lightly into the barber-shop with her mother and hopped into the chair next to me. And the barber beamed all over, laughed and joked and asked how she and all her dollies were, and fussed around and pinned a great white cloth about her, and addressing her mother laughingly inquired if it wasn't a shame to lose all those beautiful curls. And mother said it was, but that all the little girls in the neighborhood had theirs bobbed and Mary wouldn't give her a bit of peace until she had her's done likewise.

And, of course, it's all very fitting and proper and all that sort of thing to have bobbed hair and to some folks it's quite becoming, too, and besides it's healthful and convenient, especially with women. And, anyway, it was none of my business. And I don't know whether I'm getting silly or sentimental, old-fashioned or just plain goofy, but do you know as I watched those golden ringlets fall to the floor my heart sank within me and I felt that I had lost something personal, something very dear and sweet and beautiful.

EASTERN STARS INITIATE TEN FRIDAY NIGHT

The list included Mrs. James McBryde, Miss Cline, Mrs. E. T. Remmen, Mrs. O. D. Dieterich, Mrs. George A. Campbell, Mrs. Helen Payne, Mrs. Gregg, Mrs. Vera Whitaker and Mrs. Max Green.

Besides a good local attendance, many officers from other chapters were present. There was balloting on a number of petitions for admission to the chapter and at the close of work the chapter adjourned to the banquet hall where refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed, covers being laid for about 150.

MUSIC CLUB'S BARITONE IS FINE ATHLETE

When Clarence Whitehill, the handsome baritone who will sing in this city on Friday evening, October 12, under the auspices of the Glendale Music club, the public will have the pleasure of seeing one of the finest athletes in the grand opera world. Mr. Whitehill is a true son of the open, and nothing suits him better during his vacation than to get away to the trees and woods, the mountain streams or the prairie where he finds time to enjoy himself as every true lover of nature should.

Mr. Whitehill began life as a cowboy, and to this day he likes the ranch life. He still displays his skill in throwing the lasso, and can rope a running steer either by the horns or leg with a skill that is the envy of many a youngster who prides himself as an expert.

Singing and acting to Mr. Whitehill is a professional art, and he does not believe that boyhood pleasures should be forgotten. Such a life as he leads during his vacation goes to fit him for his winter and fall work. He likes to be always in good trim. Mr. Whitehill is of the impression that singers do not get enough of out door life. During the vacation period they like to lounge about too much. To all young aspiring singers Mr. Whitehill issues this one and only call: "Back to the country, the mountain or ocean. But be sure it is the country and not filled with the gaiety of life that one finds in the city."

Season tickets, eight events, for $5.00, with reserved seats on sale at the Glendale Music store and the Brunswick Shop.

While there he dropped from a weight of 150 pounds to 90 pounds as a result of his privations.

Another veteran, Mr. Hackman, told of his experience in the same conflict.

Dr. Jessie Russell entertained with an account of interesting things seen during her trip to Mexico, dwelling particularly on the beautiful, well cared for parks to be found in all cities of any size.

An incident of the meeting was the presentation of an easel, the gift of Lenora Skelton, to be used in the ceremony of draping the charter.

GIRL SCOUTS IN FIRST MEETING HORNER HOME

Troop No. 3 of Girls Scouts, of which Mrs. Frances Jackson is captain and Mrs. R. C. Horner, lieutenant, will have its first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Horner at 432 West Broadway next week and it will take the form of an evening party. There will be a short business session when plans will be made for troop activities during the coming winter, and the remainder of the evening will be devoted to games, followed by the serving of refreshments. The troop is limited to 24 and is full. It is being hampered in its plans by the fact that part of its membership is composed of high school girls and part of intermediates whose programs interfere somewhat, particularly on account of the half-day sessions at the high school.

Members of the Committee of Five appointed to arrange for the permanent organization of a Community Chest, met Friday at the Chamber of Commerce and agreed upon a plan which will be submitted to the full chest committee at a meeting called by Chairman Hewitt for next Thursday night at the Chamber of Commerce.

One of Glendale's Growing Establishments

Dr. Marlenee, who came to Glendale on the exemption board from San Bernardino, where he was local examiner for the Santa Fe for a number of years, gives some interesting views on optometry and service.

To take a piece of glass about a quarter of an inch thick, two inches long and one and one-half inches wide, from it fashion a lens that will bring relief to a sufferer from defective eyesight is truly an art.

We all remember the days, not so very long ago, when jewelers, general stores and the "house-to-house" peddler carried an assortment of "Spectacles." Those were the days when we walked up to the tray of glasses and tried them on, one after another, until we found six or seven pairs that made us "see better." Finally we worked our selection down to two or three pairs, until, in sheer desperation, we picked on one, very often to find that the relief we sought was of short duration.

Today it is far different. Modern science, when practiced by a man who thoroughly understands it, and who has at his command the best developed instruments for accurate examination of the eye, has given us sure and permanent relief for our vision defects. Taking advantage of all that science has to offer, Dr. C. L. Marlenee, at 116 East Broadway, has one of the best equipped optometry establishments in this part of the state. In fact, his is the only complete lens grinding and polishing plant between Los Angeles and Bakersfield.

Coming to Glendale five years ago, Dr. Marlenee won favor and a steadily increasing patronage through his competent, skillful and painstaking service to all who seek relief from eye troubles. Speaking of this rapid growth, Dr. Marlenee states: "I have always been a firm believer in the old saying, 'You get what you give.' This has always been my motto, and, in applying it to my business, I have shortened it somewhat, 'Give to Get.' By this I mean that, in order to establish a desirable business, a man must give real service. It is not enough that he furnish glasses to patrons—this only goes half way; he must furnish glasses that give the greatest possible relief without a chance of injury; he must keep in touch with his patient for at least a year after a fitting and make any correction that may arise in that time."

This is not idle talk, because Dr. Marlenee's statements are borne out by facts. His testing rooms are fitted with the best developed modern appliances for detecting eye troubles. So fine has science drawn the line that it is possible to locate the trouble and prescribe the proper lens by the use of instruments alone. This is especially advantageous to children, as they are apt to become confused and, therefore, not capable of knowing just what lens fits them best. In speaking of his lens grinding and polishing plant, Dr. Marlenee says that he can give better service by grinding his own lenses, faster service in delivering the finished product, and better results in achieving just exactly the right lens.

He retained his interests in San Bernardino for a time, but sold them recently, owing to the press of affairs here. Well known all over this section, Dr. Marlenee has patients who come to him from Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena and San Bernardino almost every day.

"Taking the matter as a whole," continued Dr. Marlenee, "superior service and reliable goods cannot lie. Sooner or later their true character will develop in satisfaction to the patient."

OBSERVATIONS

BY A GLENDALE OLD TIMER

It has been a real deprivation to me, this having to lay off from my weekly talks with fellow old timers because of a stress of other work that took all my time. While I enjoy the living present in this beautiful Southland of ours, yet it is like the waiting of the perfume laden breezes from the roses of Sharon to hark back to those sweet memories of the long ago when life seemed to stretch before me as a pathway of golden sunlight.

I was thinking the other day of some of the experiences of forty years ago and Walter Crow came into my mind. I wonder how many of you old timers ever heard him. He was an eccentric genius, always wore his raven black hair long and sometimes when his false upper teeth hurt him he would discard them for days at a time, with little effect, however, on his enunciation. He was quite a clever reciter and a marvel with the violin, making it mimic most any sound that could be imagined. Again, he would unscrew the bow, loop the hair over the strings, and then, with the bow held underneath the violin and the hair touching all the strings he would play all four parts of "Nearer My God to Thee" with a decided pipe organ effect. His wife traveled with him a few seasons and her specialty was standing with her back to the organ, working a pedal with one foot and playing a tune perfectly. Walter was very fond of newspaper men and spent a good deal of his spare time in their offices. He came into mine one time and said he'd write me a poem that would be eagerly read by everybody. He sat down at my desk, scribbled a little while and then handed over the following:

"I dip my pen into the ink
And sit and think and think and think.
Again I dip my pen into the ink
And sit and think and think and think."

Many novelists have taken great liberties with history, twisting facts and dates to suit their romances. Even Sir Walter Scott was not above this practice, as will be noted in his "Talisman," "Fair Maid of Perth," "Anne of Geierstein" and "Quentin Durward."

Jane Porter's "Scottish Chiefs," though it is most fascinating to read, is the grossest perversion of history imaginable. The military career of the hero, Scotland's purest patriot, Sir William Wallace, is abridged by several years and his friendship with Robert Bruce very much misstated. The latter is represented as attending the funeral of Wallace, though the latter was treacherously slain by the base English king Edward I. nine years before. Traitors are exalted as patriots and vice versa in this book of Miss Porter's.

In "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," Elizabeth Ellis pictures the infamous Lord George Jeffreys, murderer of hundreds of peaceful men, but as the cause of the rebellious James Monmouth against King James II. as a man of singularly handsome, refined, even noble appearance, except when he was very angry or in the act of passing sentence upon a rebel, when it was like that of a fiend. History tells us at times and vain of his powers of repartee and punning, which he considered highly humorous.

It is singular the fascination there is for some of the gentlest persons in a prize fight, where two men, or creature called men, batter and mar each other's features for money. O yes, there is something called fame in it for them and even what they consider honor. But it is not sport. It is brutal, hellish beastliness—begging pardon of the beast. Yet newspapers print columns of nauseous gush about it and human beings, some of them females, alas, pay millions of dollars to see the sordid spectacle, then consider themselves cheated if it is not bloody enough. I haven't words to express my sentiments regarding creatures who engage in such "sport," but a little article I read the other day, written before the recent blood-fest of Mr. Dempsey and Senor Firpo was pulled off comes so near it that I quote it herewith:

On September 14 Mr. Jack Dempsey, who did not whip the German army, will attempt to whip Mr. Louis Firpo, South America, called the "Wild Bull of the Pampas."

Fortunately our gentlemen cows cannot read and are unaware of this slanderous comparison. If one of these men is injured and helpless the other will step up and calmly place a well aimed blow intended to knock him senseless.

This is sport!
Neither one of these men will kick or bite the other, nor will he try to gouge out his opponent's eyes. These things are against the rules. Things just about as bad are not against the rules and will be done.

Possibly one hundred thousand people will see the fight. Three-fourths of these people never had a bloody nose in their lives. Probably half of them would run or cry if slapped on their faces. There will be a considerable sprinkling of very decent people there who have to be there in the way of business, to report the affair for newspapers or for other purposes. These men having seen many prize fights know that the thing is not sport nor anything resembling sport. Also they know strange, dark things about the graft and fakery, greed and dirt of the game which the ordinary man has never even imagined.

There will be other decent people there who will go out of curiosity, leave in disgust and never see a prize fight again.

Very few of the real sportsmen of the country will be there. The leaders of such amateur sports as football, tennis, track and field athletics, will mostly be conspicuous by their absence. This affair will be conducted strictly in accordance with the laws of the greatest state in the Union—New York. Our great grandchildren will hardly be able to believe this, but it is true. How long will it be true?

We old timers all love this beautiful Southland and count it our real home but still the mystic chords of memory lead us in fancy back to the dear old eastern home we left, where our loved ones lie buried and where the friends of our happy youthful days many of them still live. Mayhap the old homestead where once we played in childish glee and which is hallowed by the memory of mother's sainted face, still stands beneath the sturdy oaks or maples by the side of a dusty country road or city street. What a joy, then, when a thoughtful friend or loved one takes some pictures of the old familiar scenes and sends them, with a letter of greeting. Such was the recent experience of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac H. Pearson of 644 East Harvard, when they received a letter from their son Ben, who lives in St. Louis but who was for a time a resident of Glendale, then of Hollywood. He had visited the old home place in Fayette, Mo., where for 48 years his parents lived in the same big brick house with its surroundings of an acre of shrubbery, flowers, fruit and shade trees. There Isaac Pearson took his fair young bride in 1868 when they came from far-off Wilmington, North Carolina, and there all of their ten children were born. Ben sent, enclosed in a ten-page letter, several kodak pictures of the house and grounds. It was with mixed feelings of joy and sadness that the aged couple looked upon these pictured views of the dear old home they loved so well.

I do not view the laying out and paving of the new truck boulevard, Riverside drive, with unmixed pleasure, for it seems to me it will divert much tourist travel from passing through our city. It is not to be expected that only trucks will use the new thoroughfare, as it will doubtless prove a great attraction for pleasure autoists. To my notion the improvements planned by Thomas W. Watson, our former city manager, would have done more to divert travel through the very heart of our city, had they been carried out, than any since sides, into Burbank; and the extension of Mountain street from Brand's castle east along the foothills, crossing the wash near old Verdugo park and joining Verdugo road at Canada boulevard, would have provided us with a set of highways that would have led thousands of autoists yearly through every section of our beautiful city. I certainly wish some plans like these could still be carried out before we are left to one side by such highways as Riverside drive.

DR. C. L. MARLENEEMOVING TO NEW LOCATION

Takes Half of Large Room of Walker Jewelry Store

Dr. C. L. Marlenee is moving next Monday from 106 to 116 East Broadway, where he occupies half of the Walker Jewelry store, and he invites all his many friends and patrons to inspect the strictly modern, newly equipped and thoroughly up-to-date office he has in the new location. Dr. Marlenee came to Glendale five years ago from San Bernardino to do war work as a member of the exemption board. He liked the city so well that he concluded to "carry on" in his profession here. So he established and equipped an office at 106 East Broadway and purchased a delightful home at 301 South Central avenue. As new and practical developments in optometry were put forth Dr. Marlenee added them to his equipment, until today he has an establishment second to none in this locality. In fact he has, according to his own statement, the only complete lens grinding and polishing plant between Los Angeles and Bakersfield.

His testing rooms are fitted with the best modern appliances for detecting eye troubles. So fine has science drawn the line that it is possible to locate the trouble and present the lens needed by the use of instruments alone. This is especially helpful to children, says the doctor, as they are apt to become confused and therefore not capable of knowing just what lens fits them best.

MIZPAH, CLASS OF BAPTIST CHURCH, IS ENTERTAINED

Members of the Mizpah class of the First Baptist church were delightfully entertained Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wayland Wood, 225 Arden avenue.

As it was the regular meeting of the class a business session was held at which plans were discussed for a missionary box to be sent to China at Christmas time, some of the members having brought contributions.

Following the business, dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and a social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. Wood's home was beautifully decorated with cosmos and ferns in honor of the occasion. Ladies present were: Mesdames H. B. Fleishman, C. D. Baum, H. E. Nelson, W. H. Kilpatrick, Katherine B. Rowe, Thomas Meehan, J. R. Detweiler, F. I. Downing, James G. Henry, F. A. Baggs, A. H. Betts, C. E. Chenoweth and the hostess.

No matter how new a clock may be it is sure to show the marks of time.

CHILD HEALTH WORK ADVANCES NATION GREATLY
Fifteen years of really concerted organized scientific effort for health, especially of our children, will advance our nation, physically, mentally, morally and economically, three generations in one. This is the prophetic statement made by Herbert Hoover, president of the American Child Health association, as a word of greeting to visitors to the Boston Health show, to be held in Boston, October 6 to 13, and embracing also, the annual meeting of the American Public Health association, October 8 to 11.

As head of perhaps the largest and most influential child health association in the world, Mr. Hoover was asked for a message on health in connection with the show which, it is believed, will be the biggest exhibit of its kind ever held in the United States. Mr. Hoover's words will be lettered on the walls of Mechanics hall, where the show will be held, for the purpose of being at once a greeting and a stimulus to the thousands engaged in health work who will attend.

Mr. Hoover's words are significant, according to health authorities, upon a new era, not the least indication of which was the banding together in January of the forces of the American Child Hygiene association and the Child Health Organization of America, with the formation of the American Child Health association as the result.

The association has set out upon a definite effort to reclaim child health not only in the United States but in foreign lands as well. Already the influence of its work extends beyond the borders of the United States, and among its several thousands of members many are from foreign countries. The headquarters of the association are at 532 Seventeenth street, Washington, and the executive offices at 370 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Truths in Epigram

Loveliness needs not the foreign aid of ornament, but is when unadorn'd adorn'd the most. — Thomson.

God made the country and man made the town. — Cowper.

One murder made a villain, millions a hero. Princes were privileged to kill, and numbers sanctified the crime. — Porteus.

BENEATH THE SURFACE

The Turks believe that the white race is composed of hypocrites. They base their view on the fact that Christian nations are continually at war among themselves. The Turks have penetrated the shallowness of diplomacy, recognize it as the mere routine of insincerity, and are glad that it opens a way for future conflicts. The more the white race is torn by hatreds and armed forays, the better for the plans of Islam. The Turks have confident faith that Islam is to dominate the world, because Christian civilization is expected to fall through the weakness generated by war after war.

Not long ago Greece and Turkey were at war. Ostensibly the larger nations had nothing to do with it; they were assumed to be neutral, even if concerned. The truth was that England under Lloyd George was backing Greece, and that without such backing the Greeks could not have put an army into the field. And when the Turks chased the Greeks to the border, the victors were bearing arms supplied by France and Italy. "In other words, the powers that had been allies were allies only that they might save their own bacon. There was no fraternity in their association as they fought shoulder to shoulder against a common foe. Each still cherished the ancient grudges, the old desire to be advantaged at the expense of the others."

Apparently it is time for civilization to take stock of itself, and reckon up the elements of its stability. It hardly can last indefinitely as an agglomerate of pretense, bad faith and double dealing.

KEEPING SUPERSTITION ALIVE

Says a writer in a current daily, referring to a particular date of the month:

"Adverse aspects predominate until nightfall, making this an inauspicious day for important matters. If it were not for an interposing favorable influence between Mercury and Venus, conditions would indeed be undesirable and unpleasant. . . . A child born today will be generous in thought and deed, and joyous in disposition." And so forth.

This is the twentieth century. The level of intelligence is supposed to have risen with the passing years. There have been laudable efforts to educate the mind. Science has wrought marvels. Yet there are those who seem to have evaded the chance to gain wisdom, and who elect still to sit in darkness. Else would there be written so such crass nonsense as that quoted, and none to read it for any purpose save to wonder at its folly.

The stars have no influence on individual human destiny. Astrology is not even a pseudo science. It has the dignity that marks the art of reading fortunes in the bottom of a teacup. Its patter is less convincing than that of the soothsayer who sees the future in a deck of cards. Palmistry, itself a practice that has no merit, is superior to astrology. By gazing at the hand one may discern whether the subject is a blacksmith or a fiddler, a circumstance leaving astrology far behind.

No baby has any need to be concerned over the positions of Venus and Mercury. The little ones have troubles enough without this additional load.

AGAINST HAZING

President von KleinSmid of the University of Southern California has warned students of the institution that no hazing will be permitted. Such ban upon a common form of activity must be regarded as wholly in keeping with the dignity of an educational institution, particularly one open to women as well as men. In special schools, such as those at Annapolis and West Point, restrictions might be less absolute. But even in the military schools hazing often reaches such a pitch that the authorities are forced to check it with severe hand. More than a few cadets have been dismissed for violation of the rule.

The trouble with hazing is that it is likely to become cruel, and often it is a display of cowardice. It savors too much of gang rule. The subject of a hazing has no chance against numbers. Either he is awed by the crowd, or by the traditions of the student body, so that he submits to humiliating treatment. Despite excess in the practice, hazing is only theoretically condemned in the army and navy schools. It is regarded as a disciplinary experience tending to bring out many qualities. Often hazing at those places is without any savor of malice. Strange as the fact may seem, while in itself a violation of regulations, it tends to enforcement of other and perhaps more important regulations. An order from an upper classman will cause a plebe to straighten slouching shoulders, and keep his uniform in order, being more effective than a similar order from the instructor.

However, on general principles, hazing is to be condemned. It is the brutal practical joke carried to an extreme. It interferes with scholarship and engenders hatreds. Always it excites reprisal, and if this may not be visited upon the offending individual, it falls upon some innocent student later, the original victim seeking in this manner to get square with the world.

COSTLY HONORS WON

Belgium appears to have won the race for the Gordon Bennett cup. This contest of balloonists was marked by a series of tragedies, including the death of five pilots or aides, injuries to four others, and the destruction of several of the balloons, two of them falling into the sea. One dual catastrophe was due to lightning. Against the electric bolt there seems to be no protection. Considering everything, some question is likely to arise as to whether the competition was worth while. It really is a superfluous question, for danger is no check when there is a struggle for supremacy in any field. Danger is accepted as a matter of course.

What the dirigible balloon may mean in a commercial way is still a matter of uncertainty. Present experiments are not with a view to finding out. They pertain to the possible use of the dirigible as an instrument of war. The fact is to be regretted. Nations have much to say about peace. Diplomats grow eloquent on the subject, as they plan to take advantage, and bring about conditions making peace impossible. The only good to be expected from the perfecting of agencies of destruction, is in the chance that they may be made so fearful as to end wars by the very prospect of the horrors that must attend them. This is a faint hope. Wars of the past have not been free from horrors. No people having a grievance or a scheme of conquest, has yet refrained through reflecting on the hideous results that are the concomitants of armed conflict.

Aviators are making an effort to ban stunt flying. Their reason is that the accidents resulting from needless exhibitions of recklessness tend to bring the airplane and its activities into discredit. While the purpose of the staid and sensible flyers may be understood and commended, their success is doubtful. Nothing short of breakage of the neck has cured any stunt specialist yet.

Certain lots offered for sale are said to be directly in the path of almost inevitable annual floods. The least the purveyors of this property could do would be to supply each customer with a raft and lifeboat.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to convince a coward that discretion is the better part of valor.

Some of the things you ought to know can be learned in no other way than by reading the advertisements.

Many a man has made a fortune by not writing poetry.

SUBDUING FANCY

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

In my reading recently I came across this expression:

"A declaration of independence against fancy." And I headed it mightily.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

In all courts of domestic relations there should be an expert psychologist whose chief duty would be to release men and women from the bonds of fancy and connect their mental processes with reality.

Between people and happiness there stands usually nothing more substantial than araith, the vision of something that never existed and which in all probability is unlikely to exist, but which fills the mind and by contrast belittles reality.

Women live for the most part in a dream world the center of which is a mythical "Prince Charming," he who will some day come and carry them off to a fairy land of happiness in which the puzzles and hardships, the pains and sorrows of reality have no part. Men, too, embrace fancy to the injury of reality, though the dreams of men commonly concern themselves with matters of sentiment only while the fancy of women removes them wholly from the world of practical affairs.

Back of many divorce suits is fancy, a dream that preceded marriage and which has not been realized in it as the basis of many complaints lodged by married people against each other arise only through the actions of fancy.

One beauty of the French system of marriage is that the couples seldom find themselves pitted against rivals which are as insubstantial as moonshine.

If romantic mothers would cease to give their daughters the "Prince Charming" complex they would materially assist in the solution of America's divorce problem.

The most we have a right to expect in this world is an average human much as we ourselves, an average fate with the average joys and sorrows; and since this is true we should set resolutely to work to make our declaration of independence against that fancy which stands to rob us of the common lot with its common blessings.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGEM

If I had not seen Jimmy Adams in action, I might have believed him. But he can walk farther and faster than a horse. He can eat more than a wolf. He never abates one lusty snore the whole night through. But when I met him this morning:

"How are you, Jimmy?" I asked. Not that I cared particularly.

"Oh," said Jimmy, dolefully, "I'm not well." He always says that. He isn't a hypochondriac, exactly. Just the makings of one. He hasn't fallen to the depth of professing symptoms as yet. He only lays claim to vague and nonspecific aches and pains.

Trouble is with Jimmy, as I see it, that he thinks about himself too much. When his attention is distracted from J. Adams, Jr., he is a lively and likable young man. But between times he pores over Jimmy's case, his prospects, failures, futures, what-not, to the exclusion of an entire world full of things much more worthy of attention. Feeling conscious that he is not an object calculated to upset by its contemplation the normal mind he tries to attract the notice he craves in some other way.

"I'm not feeling well," says Jimmy, when what he really wishes to say is:

"Pet me. Make a fuss over me. Tell me I'm a wonder. Refer to me as the 'brilliant Mr. A.'"

The sort of attention he really gets by his groans is not the desirable sort. We healthy humans instinctively fly from ill-health. This may be selfish in us, but we do. We despise people who lay claim to a frailty they do not possess. At the best they bore and worry us.

And as for Jimmy—if he goes on cultivating ill-health he'll get it in earnest one of these days. There is no surer way. I can set up a mitral murmur in four days by persistently assuring myself that my heart is unsound. If he talks about his aches long enough he'll get 'em.

Cultivating ill-health doesn't pay. And too much thought about himself has spoiled many a promising young man.

THE LISTENING POST

To get somewhere you go straight ahead. Provided Somewhere is straight ahead of you.

There may be detours, for which you will have to turn out.

There may be obstacles or barriers you will have to surmount or overcome.

But to get somewhere you go as nearly straight ahead as you can.

The mariner to get to the Orient, steers his ship as nearly straight ahead as he can, after he gets his course.

The railroad train to get across the continent travels as nearly straight ahead as it can, after it gets on its way.

A man to get to the end of the street gets his course true and then goes straight ahead.

He may have to make occasional changes of direction because of torn up streets and opened gas mains and miles of building material thrown up, but he keeps his objective in mind and moves straight toward it.

So when you see a ship sailing, or steaming rather, on a straight course, you know it has an objective.

And when you see a railroad train gliding across the desert or prairie or through the tunnel, you know it has an objective.

And when you see a man marching off in a direction straight ahead, you know he has an objective.

A bee moves in a straight line. Called a "bee line." The shortest distance between two points.

Songs of the Poets

Love and Death—By Rosa Mulholland

In the wild autumn weather, when the rain was on the sea,
And the boughs sobbed together, Death came and spoke to me:

"Those red drops of thy heart I have come to take from thee;
As the storm sheds the rose, so thy love shall broken be."

Death said to me.

Then I stood straight and fearless while the wind was on the wave,
And I spake low and tearless: "When thou hast made my grave,

Those red drops from my heart then thou shalt surely have;
But the rose keeps its bloom, as I my love will save."

All for my grave."

In the wild autumn weather a dread word slipped from the sheath;

While the boughs sobbed together, I fought a fight with Death,

And I vanquished him with prayer, and I vanquished him by faith:

Now the summer air is sweet with the rose's fragrant breath

That conquered Death.

ANATOLE FRANCE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

TO MANY of us Anatole France is just a story teller. But he was also a great philosopher.

He chose fiction as the best form for conveying his message to his age, but those who read him merely to get the story are likely to be disappointed. His tales are often a bit tedious, and many of them are so thoroughly French that they hardly appeal to English speaking people.

What I like best about Anatole France is the occasional flash of wit, a peculiarly Gallic and subtle wit, or paragraph that evidences a power of vision that is unusual. He was a deep and clear, if somewhat cynical thinker.

I do not like to read his books steadily through so much as I like to wander about his field and pick up here and there a flashing gem.

For instance, here he condenses a ten-page article into a line or two, and puts into a capsule of wit a thought that has haunted you for weeks: "Do not be afraid to lead to an artist's work an ideal he never had. To understand a work of genius means to create a new one in yourself."

And who has better administered the world such a dose of combined optimism and criticism? "Time destroys all our lovely sentiments, admiration, love, faith, hope; all except pity. Pity is left to us so that our old age shall not be a sepulchre."

He has that curious genius that is able to state an old truth and make it sound like a smart saying and not a platitude. As this: "It is not only horses who need blinders so that they may go straight. With a curiosity to understand everything we do nothing."

A wonderfully French plea for toleration is this: "We call those sceptics who do not share our illusions. Yet perhaps there are other illusions just as comforting."

Thus delicately he punctures the satisfied reaction: "Only one thing in a man's thought attracts me—unsoundness. The mind that is not at all worried irritates me or bores me."

"An absolutely sincere and candid confession is so interesting," he writes. And continues with a sentence which is a shrewd simile. "Yet since men have existed nothing of the sort has ever been heard. None ever told it all."

How human he always remains we may gather from such a remark as this: "It is the man I seek ever in the artist. The greatest work has no value except in its relation to life."

In this paragraph he gives a curious explanation of the ideal, making it the child of mystery: "The charm which touches most souls is the charm of mystery. The real is of use to us for the purpose of making some sort of ideal out of it. That is perhaps its chief use."

Although he is a tremendously worldly fellow, he is never irreverent to the deep divinities of life. He said, "In life we need to reckon with chance. Chance, to be accurate, is God."

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

CURING MOB ADDICTS

[Washington Post]

Convictions of three men for participation in mob violence in Oklahoma and indictments against three for similar offense in Georgia are comforting variations on the theme of lawlessness as carried in recent reports from those commonwealths. From these items it appears that constituted authority is asserting itself against mob-violence addicts who have challenged it. The movement to punish participants in the floggings that have recently terrorized those jurisdictions should be speeded until the guilty have been dragged to justice. Make the penalty for such participation heavy, certain and swift, and there will be less mob violence.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Italy, Spain, Russia and Bulgaria are under dictatorships. As to the first two it may be said that the change has been beneficial. Italy was drifting to anarchy, and Mussolini saved it.

In Spain, Rivera has in a short term of weeks brought about vast reforms. He has reduced the cost of living, ousted grafting politicians, discharged useless employees, ended banditry by ending the bandits, and abolished syndicalism by a show of force. That was doing things.

Russia, although under a dictatorship, stands on a different plane. It is ruled less by an individual than by a group disturbed by fantasies. Bulgaria is in a state of transition still, as likely to end in wreck as in stability.

Evidently the trend is towards dictatorship throughout a large part of Europe. Perhaps the people have concluded that unable to rule themselves, they must have somebody to do it. The latest country to show inclination to elevate a dictator to power is Germany. There is a distinct movement having this purpose in view. The bolsheviks of Russia long have sought to get control of Germany. If they could, they would establish there a dictatorship of ignorance, such as they maintain at home.

But if Germany shall have a dictator, it is probable that he will be a man of Teutonic and not of Slavic sympathies. Far from encouraging the reds, he would, judged by the examples of Italy and Spain, be their pronounced enemy, and their crushing would be an early and important part of his task.

So far as the people of the United States are aware, Obregon is the first good president that Mexico ever has had. He is a real executive without being the Diaz type of dictator. Just as he has got the ship of state to sailing on even keel would be a peculiar time to throw him overboard.

Angels look after some youngsters. Little Doris Gaskell of Port Angeles, Wash., 22 months of age, wandered away from home. She was twenty-four hours alone in the woods. Before retiring at night to her bed in a pile of brush, she had removed her clothes, and without a stitch on, she rested through a drizzling rain; she was just up from an attack of croup at that. When they found Doris she was scratched a little, but full of pep and without a sign of croup.

Must have been the rustle of angels' wings in the darkness that night.

The earthquake losses of Japan have been figured out as $13 per capita. Of course that is a large total, but it is a long way from appalling ruin. Red Cross contributions from this country are $10,000,000, a sum large enough to help appreciably. By the time it has been exhausted the Japanese will be found taking care of themselves.

A writer says that when your nose is in the air, that is, turned upward, you cannot think; that to think it is necessary to have the forehead turned down. Pretty hard on astronomers.

This might be important if true. Not being true, it is merely amusing.

Impressive sentences were given convicted robbers in Los Angeles courts recently. "Four to fifty-five years" or "three to forty years."

Upon analysis the sentences lose their impressiveness. There are many precedents indicating that the first sentence means four years, and the second, three years.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE FIRST HUNDRED

Bob was looking disconsolately at his French exercise. So deep was his gloom that he hadn't noticed that his little brother had found his precious crayons and was happily engaged in drawing round men and rounder children on the clean cover of his geography.

Uncle Ben captured the crayon and then gave Bob a cheerful poke. "Come, come! Cheer yourself up. It's only the first hundred years that are so hard. After that there's nothing to it."

Glad of an excuse to look away from the distasteful lesson Bob grinned and replied, "Yes, of course! But I won't get this French learned even in a hundred years. The old stuff makes me sick. I can't learn it."

Under the wagging saying lies a grain of precious truth. It is only the beginning that is hard. The mind balks at taking up a new subject. Every step goes against the grade for a certain distance, but then it is as though the mind said: "Very well; if you mean this of course I'll help. Thought you were just fooling round a bit. Of course, if you're in earnest about it I'll get right at it." From that point on the way is far, far easier.

That ought to indicate to teachers and parents that the beginning of things should be taught with the utmost care, the steps carefully measured, each one made clear and the ground left broken for the next one.

I don't believe that the better way to start a new subject is with a great rush and dash and splash. Experience tells me that a gentle little nibble with the bait left exposed for the next one is far better.

Feed it out slowly and gently and the learner will not be exhausted by his first try. Give him only as much as he can digest and still feel a bit hungry and his appetite will be the most lasting.

When the teacher and class charge violently at the new subject like algebra—"Why, we've been working over an hour! Way over time. Algebra is so fascinating it has made us forget the time. We have not heard the bells. Well, well! Let's take the next twenty examples for tomorrow," he is in a fair way to make the first hundred impossible. They'll slack on the first twenty.

The first hundred anything is hard. It is hard for you and me to save the first hundred dollars. Hard for us to refuse the first hundred smokes or treats; hard, to follow the first days of routine after a long vacation. We keep at it because of our disciplined minds and perhaps because of the compelling conditions.

But the children need an understanding boost to make the first stages of a new growth. Do see that they get it.

GLENDALE WINS FROM FILLMORE BY A WALKAWAY

Both Heavyweights and Midgets Trap on Northerners

Fillmore High school had an off day yesterday. The football squad of the northern institution came down to Glendale for a little game of the gridiron sport, and suffered a double defeat at the hands of Glendale High school. The second string men of the heavyweights squad, took them into camp by a 19 to 0 score, after which the lightweights administered a 2 to 0 licking. The affair was played as one game, the heavyweights opposing the Northerners the first half and the lightweights the second half.

The game started off with a rush, and within the first five minutes the Glendale line had scored the first touchdown. After a 35-yard run from right end by Badour, who crossed the line with the yardage, the Glendale line had scored the first touchdown. Again and again the Glendale line went right through the Fillmore line for yards, ran around the ends, and completed passes that netted considerable territory. By the end of the first quarter Glendale had the ball on the Van Nuys 15 yard line.

No sooner had the second quarter opened than Crow crossed the line for the second touchdown. Failure to convert cost Glendale another point. A long end run by Walton followed in the next play by a forward pass, scored another touchdown for the Dynamiters. Detrich received the pass and ran with the ball over the line. Crow converted, and completed the scoring for the half.

The Midgets then took up the battle. They went right up the field for a touchdown the first thing. Al Franchise scored, and Lovell converted with a whiz of a kick. In the fourth quarter, another touchdown was scored in quick order, but Lovell failed on the kick. La Franchise scored the final touchdown just a few minutes before the whistle, and Lovell converted.

Fillmore played a defensive game throughout. Only twice did they elect to receive, and then they held the ball but a short time. As a defensive team they were mighty meek, however.

The locals showed up to good advantage during the game. Coach Hayhurst used his second string men in the first half in order to save his first team for the Oxnard scramble today. The lightweights put up a good game with the exception of several fumbles. Cyril Walton suffered a badly injured shoulder during the first half.

Today the Glendale team will go north to take on the Oxnard aggregation. A hot fight is expected. Next Friday they will play Franklin High, and on the following Tuesday they will mix with Hollywood. It is expected that they will

BRUIN VARSITY TAKES ON FROSH THIS AFTERNOON

Southern Branch Footballers in First Practice Combat Today

When the Southern Branch varsity meet the freshmen of the same institution on Moore field this afternoon a hot battle will ensue. For the first time this season the Bruin gridgers will be on show for public inspection. For the past couple of weeks they have been working behind barred gates, but will emerge from their seclusion when they take on the peagreeners this afternoon.

The game will do a great deal toward showing what the Cubs have in the line of pigskinners, although a real football game will not be expected. Varsity matters are daily becoming less and less complicated. Coach Cline is welding the ax with effective swiftness, and those remaining on the squad are beginning to form an exclusive group of their own.

Indications point to a heavier team than was anticipated by the coaches, one that will pack more beef than the one last year at any rate. Coach Cline is fast rounding the backfield division into shape, while the line seems to be showing up in good style. Berkeley and Cline are insisting that their men know just how to tackle and clip in the proper manner.

Several Cubs have been put out of the game by injuries received in practice during the week. Just how the freshmen will show up against the varsity cannot be said until this afternoon. Coach Cline has not announced his lineup, but it is probable that he will use as many men as possible during the encounter.

FLEET FOOTBALL SEASON TO OPEN A THABOR TODAY

Ten Thousand gobs and civilians are expected to be on hand at Trona field this afternoon to witness the first round of games for the 1923 football championship of the United States battleship fleet. Six of the highest touted eleven in the battleship force will be in action simultaneously.

More than 300 candidates from the various fighting craft in the harbor have been limbering up at Trona field during the past fortnight, with a noticeable spurt since the Nevada squad defeated the Oklahoma eleven 6 to 0 last Tuesday. The games scheduled today follow:

U. S. S. Idaho vs. U. S. S. Pennsylvania; U. S. S. California vs. U. S. S. New Mexico; U. S. S. Maryland vs. U. S. S. Tennessee.

ALLIANCE FOLK HOLD CONVENTION IN GLENDALE SOON

A Christian and Missionary Alliance convention will be held in the Gospel Tabernacle church, Louise and Chestnut streets on September 30 to October 7, inclusive. Sessions will be held daily except Saturday at 2:30 and 7:30. Rev. C. H. Christman is the pastor.

Speakers: Rev. E. J. Richards of New York, home secretary of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. One of the best speakers in the Alliance, will speak every evening. Dr. Frederick W. Farr, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of Los Angeles, an unusually gifted minister of the Word of God.

Dr. Elwood P. Lyon of Pasadena will lecture on the "Signs of Christ's Second Coming." Rev. George W. Davis of Los Angeles, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle church of that city, well known and much appreciated in Glendale. Will speak Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Miss Hattie O. Shaffer, children's evangelist, will speak to the children every afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Thomas Mosley, returned missionary from China. Mrs. George Simmonds, returned missionary from South America.

An orchestra of 15 pieces will furnish the music and Mrs. E. C. Hornel and others will sing.

STANFORD FROSH MEET SAN DIEGO GRIDDERS TODAY

Cardinal Peagreeners Are Fast Rounding into Shape

(By Leon David) STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 29.—The 1923 football season will be officially opened at Stanford university today, the freshmen meeting the fast San Diego High school eleven which is one of the peerless prep school outfits of the South. The game will take place in the Stanford stadium at 2:30 p. m., and indications point to a large crowd.

Coach Husky Hunt of the freshmen is having quite a struggle to get a suitable backfield. Most of the men are either big and slow or small and fast, and it is hard to strike the necessary balance. The line is heavy, but has not yet learned to work together well. Hunt has not announced a definite lineup, as he promises to play some thirty men if the game is not too hotly contested. Some of the freshmen who are showing well are:

Wilbur Adams, brother of Fred, the Stanford wiz, who comes from Sacramento High school and may see action at end; Shipkey from Fullerton High, whose brother Harry is varsity tackle, and who is the best freshman prospect on the squad; Baldwin of Bakersfield, the best quarterback on the field, who probably will be first string quarter all season; Morrison of Santa Maria, who promises to make a reputation equal to that of his California namesake at fullback; Hyland of San Francisco, a good halfback; Ryan, another northern boy who looks good in the backfield. Then there is Hinkle of San Diego, who is attracting the attention of Adams. Another fast end is Greisler of Washington and Jefferson High of Seattle. Swan from Berkeley High is a 200-pound lineman of undoubted ability and experience. Stockham of Medford, Oregon, is another good bet in the scrimmage. Mahan is from Los Angeles Poly, and is also doing well in the line. Natcher is another Poly boy on the squad. He is fighting it out with Price of Long Beach for the position of first string center. Foulson of Hollywood High is a good tackle who is attracting the attention of Coach Hunt.

OXY FRESHMEN HAND LINCOLN SQUAD DEFEAT

Picking up two fumbles which resulted in a like number of scores, Tuffy Conn's Occidental freshmen, yesterday defeated Rabbit Mallette's Lincoln high gridgers, 12 to 6 on the latter's field. The Tiger yearlings followed the ball every minute of the play, and had every right in the world to the victory.

The game in its early stages was as good an affair as most mid-season encounters. The usual fumbles were a minus quantity, and both teams played brilliant football, particularly in the defensive department. Neither team was able to make a first down in the initial period, although Oxy through gains on exchange of punts was able to keep the ball in Lincoln territory most of the time.

For the New Year's game, it is Les Henry, prominent resident of Pasadena and alumnus of the University of California, who has succeeded in inducing the Naval authorities to allow the Annapolis footballers to journey to southern California this winter. By quiet negotiation, the U. S. C. was not the champion of the west, and the great New Year's struggle, reputed to be the great East vs. West game had degenerated into a contest between two second rate teams, neither champions in their own field.

This year the winner of the Pacific Coast conference will accept the invitation for the Pasadena encounter. That is practically certain. The Navy has assured the committee that the Annapolis team will come west. Annapolis always has a wonderful football team, one of the very best in the country. With the Navy matched against the champion of the west it looks like the New Year's game of 1924 will be a real battle, and the Tournament of Roses battle will be restored to its position of the great championship game of the country.

Leslie Henry is to be congratulated upon bringing the Navy west

CALIFORNIA TO PLAY ST. MARY'S THIS AFTERNOON

Bears Being Watched with Keen Interest in Second Game of Season

BERKELEY, Calif., Sept. 29.—The University of California will take on the St. Mary's eleven here this afternoon. There is little doubt that the Golden Bears will win, but keen interest is being shown in the form of the California team. It is expected that they will make a very much improved showing over that of the Alumni game.

As to the relative merits of the two teams, little can be said at the present time. St. Mary's has a big advantage in an early start in practice. By this time it should have developed some type of offense that will enable it to make a real fight.

California, is, of course, the prime favorite in today's game. The Bears are far superior in experienced material. Just two weeks have gone by since the start of their season. Today's game should, therefore, be St. Mary's, concentrating on the offense, while California plays a defensive game and watches for the breaks.

Not unless the game becomes awfully close and the record in danger of becoming tarnished will the California team attempt to use offensive work. Practice for the last few weeks has all been concentrated on defensive play with just enough offensive work to supply the necessary punch.

DEER KILLED IN CITY LIMITS

EUREKA, Calif., Sept. 29.—(United Press)—Forest fires during the previous two weeks drove the deer down from the Humboldt county woods almost to the city limits, and several fine animals were bagged within two miles of town.

We for one are glad to see the Navy come west. It will mean that this section of the country will have a chance to see the famous football squad of Annapolis, the team that has drawn immense crowds where ever it has played in a real game with the champion of the Pacific coast conference. It means that the west is recognized in the football world as a great battle ground, and the Middles will come here to press their claims to the national honors.

For years we have heard about the Navy. We have read about the big Army-Navy games, attended by throngs from all over the country, big events in every sense of the word. The Navy has had the better of nearly all of these arguments, and has earned the reputation of a great football team.

ATHLETICS WILL TANGLE WITH THE EAST FIRST TEAM

Tomorrow afternoon at Happyland Park, Verdugo Woodlands, the Glendale Athletic club baseball team will take on the East First Street Merchants of Los Angeles.

The Eastsiders are considered a strong aggregation, and the locals will have to go some to beat them. Several new faces will be seen in the Glendale lineup, states Manager Brice, who is anticipating a real lively scrap. Tommy Morgan is slated to pitch for the Athletics. The Glendale lineup follows:

U. S. C. and Caltech to Meet Today on Bo-ward Field

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Comes "Fox" Stanton and his California Institute of Technology football eleven to Bo-ward field this afternoon to meet the University of Southern California Trojans in the first game of the 1923 season in Los Angeles. This will be the premier test for both teams, and while Elmer Henderson's U. S. C. varsity is expected to romp home with the victory by a big score, as has been the custom in seasons past, a highly spectacular and hard fought game is anticipated.

Stanton's team is something of a novelty to Trojan followers, but it is known that the "Fox" has a heavy, hard-charging line that will prove a severe test to the Cardinal and Gold attack. It is probable that the Trojans will pack the ball a greater part of the time, with the Engineers playing a purely defensive game. That is just what Henderson wants—a team playing defensive football, and playing it well enough to make the Trojan backfield men resort to all their strategy to score.

In spite of all his gloom, Henderson believes that this is liable to be "his year." For three years now he has been playing a defensive game against California, going in to win if possible, but to hold the Bears' score down at all costs. He was successful last year in holding the Bears to 12 points. This year he is going to send a team out on the field against California that will have instructions to plow on and on towards the Bear goal until victory is won. It takes an attack, not merely a defense, to win.

Therefore Henderson hopes to see his men get plenty of exercise on the attack program today and in the Pomona college game next Saturday. He knows that he will need a strong offensive against Washington on October 20, and he intends to use these preliminary games to develop that attack.

Just how the Trojans will line up at the start is problematical and not of importance. It is likely that nearly every player on the Trojan bench will be shoved into the game at some time during its progress. It is not necessarily to be supposed, therefore, that the eleven men who first take the field will be the same regulars who will start against the big Pacific coast conference eleven later in the season.

It is probable that the Trojan line will be composed of the following men: Hayden Pythian and Nawi Stark, ends; Norman Anderson and Ralph Cummings, tackles; Raymond Earl and John Hawkins, guards; Cot Rice, center.

The backfield combination is a toss-up. It is possible that Johnny Loustalot will start at quarterback, with Hobbs Adams and John Riddle at halfback and Gordon Campbell at fullback. The more probable starting line-up, however, is Captain Chet Doley, quarterback; Otto Anderson and Wallace Newman, halfbacks, and Gordon Campbell, fullback.

The U. S. C. Freshmen play their first game of the season today against Loyola College. This will be a preliminary to the varsity game. The frosh will probably line up in this manner:

Coffman and Lewis, ends; Friend and Bahrendt, tackles; Britz and Cox, guards; Cravath, center; Wilcox, quarterback; Taylor and Lee, halfbacks, and Laranetta, fullback.

Los Angeles went on a batting spree yesterday, and handed the Sacramento Solons a 9 to 3 defeat. The Krugmen slammed the ball all over the lot, and were also able to prevent the Sacs from so doing. The combination of these two things usually wins a ball game.

Sacramento did the first scoring, bringing in two runs on three hits in the second inning. In the fourth canto the Angels got busy. They scored two runs that inning, four in the fifth, two more in the sixth, and one in the seventh. In the eighth frame the other Sac tally came in.

Hughes started out for the Senators, but was later relieved by Penner. The Angels totaled 17 hits off these two heavies. Douglas heaved the entire game for Los Angeles, allowing 13 hits.

[By Associated Press] PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 29.—Another shutout resulted yesterday when the Beavers and Oaks met, but Portland won this time. The score was 7 to 0. Rube Varrisco was in great form, allowing only five hits. The Beavers got only seven off Krause and Hobson, but three of these were home-run drives; King smashed two out of the park, his first two times up, and Poole made the other.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 29.—Ray Holwer, Seattle leftfielder, hit two home runs in succession here yesterday in the Coast league when the Indians defeated Vernon, 10 to 3. Veard Gregg struck out seven men in seven innings, and his Seattle team-mates pounded the Vernon pitchers hard.

The two home runs left Holwer in third place for homers for the season in the league, Paul Strand of Salt Lake having forty-one and Los Sheehan of Salt Lake, thirty-five. Rohwer also got a triple and a single, being four times at bat.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The air was full of baseballs most of the time yesterday, the same being either thrown around wildly by erring San Franciscans or batted equally wildly by savage Bees from Salt Lake. The Utah Bees won the thing, 13 to 2.

THE NEW YEAR'S GAME RESTORED TO ITS OLD PLACE

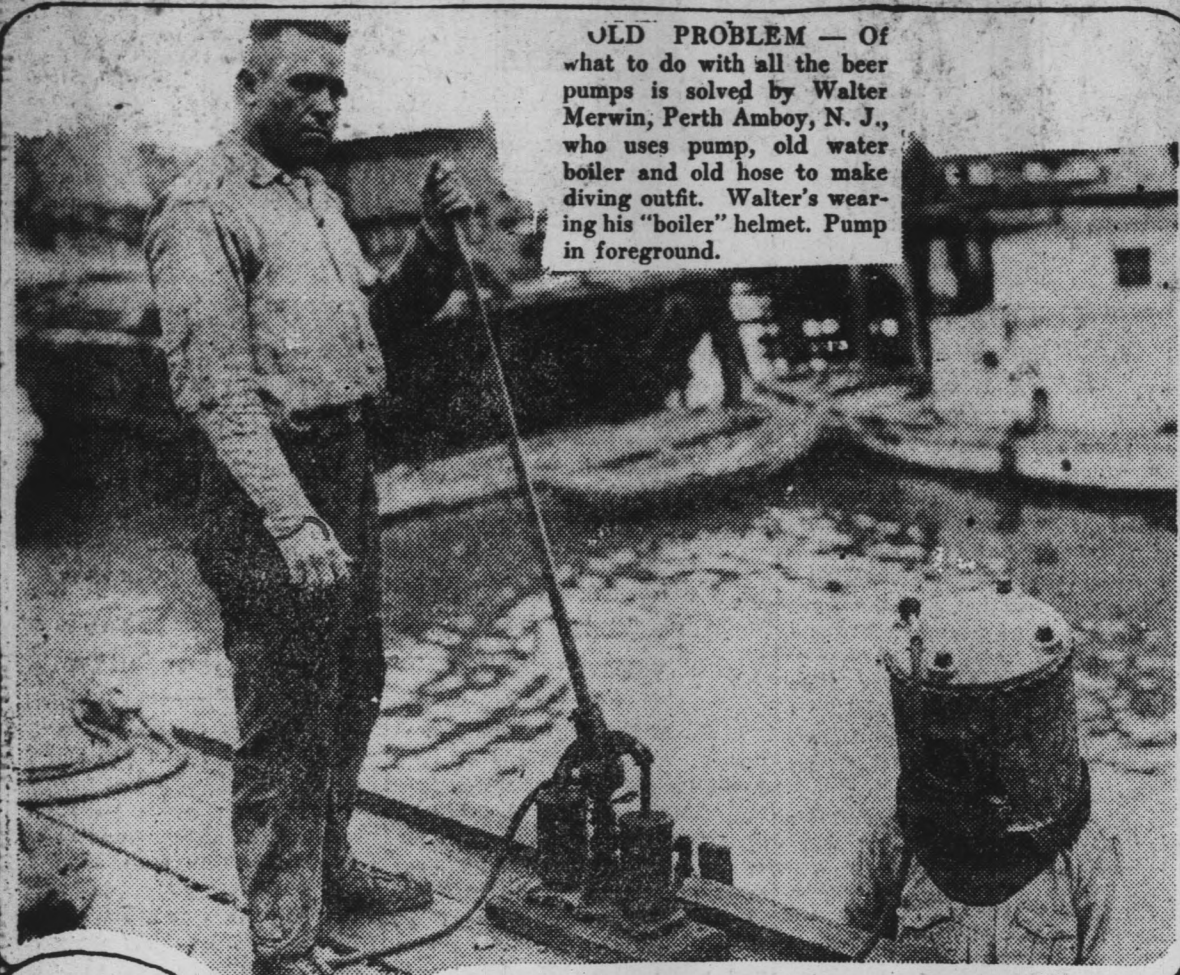

The New Year's game has been called since its beginning the great East vs. West struggle. It has been classed as the greatest national football battle of the year. In the last two seasons it has lost its standing as a great football classic, mainly because of the fact that it had not been a representative contest of the greatest teams from the two sections. The first sign of any decline in the Tournament of Roses game, was in 1922, when the representative of the east was reputed to be of lower than several other teams of that section. Washington and Jefferson college did not fare as well during the season as had been expected, and when the president came west there was a general feeling that they were not of the proper class to represent the east. They pulled a big surprise by holding the University of California—the Wonder Team that had wiped Ohio off the map the year previous—to a scoreless tie. But conditions on that day were far from what was expected. The teams played in a wallow of mud. It was just mud-mud-mud, all over the field. Of course that slowed up the game. A game slowed up is for the Golden Bears just as good as no game at all, for it is a well known fact that the Bruins are a passing, open style aggregation. That may account for the fact that Washington and Jefferson, although considered weaker than several other eastern teams, was able to hold the Blue and Gold to a scoreless tie. Be that as it may, there was general dissatisfaction with the game.

If there was dissatisfaction with the game of New Year's day, 1922, there was even more the following year. Penn State was the representative of the east. The Nittany Lions were not an undefeated team. They had made a rather poor showing during the season. Keen disappointment was shown when they were selected to come west. Several other colleges, known to be of higher caliber than Penn State, had to be passed up because of either conference rulings, prohibiting

UNCLE SAM SHARES
BIG FIGHT
PURSES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29. (United Press)—Many opportunities may be presented for Jack Dempsey to resume work late this fall and during the winter, but there is little chance that he will accept any offers to fight again until next year.

Dempsey, no doubt, is willing to fight semi-monthly if business should become that good, but there is a little question of economics that would make it very unprofitable for him to work too much. Some time ago several promoters went after Jack Kearns to sign Dempsey for a match with Harry Greb, the middleweight champion, for a late outdoor or an early indoor show, and Kearns refused to consider any purse.

Kearns said that Dempsey had earned all he was allowed to this year and he pointed out that the firm had reached the limit allowed by the law in his class and if he exceeded it they would have to pay about 50 per cent of the purse money to the government in taxes. Under the present conditions, Dempsey gets an awful socking by the revenue department every time he puts on the gloves. It sounds like a pipe to hear of Dempsey getting $200,000, $350,000 and $500,000 for a fight, but if the fans could see what is left for him when he is through splitting up with Kearns and the government, they would not be howling for congressional action to cut down the money that he is earning.

Out of a $300,000 purse, Dempsey has just about $100,000 for himself when he gets through whacking out the other ends of the money. Of course $100,000 is not to be sneezed at, but it is not $300,000. The money that a heavyweight champion gets for the actual defense of his title is rather trivial, however, compared to the receipts from other sources of revenue that are opened by possession of the title.

It is understood that Dempsey's revenue averaged from $3,500 to $5,000 per week for three years. He earned a lot of money on the stage, in the movies and for the use of his name for advertising purposes.

Babe Ruth, it is said, got close to $10,000 royalties last year from a manufacturing firm who sold Babe Ruth caps. He got almost as much from the sale of suspenders, belts and baseball uniforms bearing his name and from the literary masterpieces turned out under his masterpiece.

Dempsey's revenue from the same sources must have been much more, because the heavyweight championship is worth more in advertising even than the cut title of baseball.

Pipino, it is understood, made a half million dollars in seven months when he was fighting his way up to a championship bout with Dempsey. The South American, however, got practically every cent of his earnings for himself, as he has no manager.

Dempsey and Kearns, it has been said, work fifty-fifty on everything.

Dempsey, however, should give Kearns a big split, as he would not have earned as much if he had been taking it all if he did not have such a shrewd manager.

Kearns not only made the big purses possible for Dempsey but he increased the scale of wages for every boxer in every division.

"Jack Kearns is the greatest manager that ever lived," Johnny Kilbane, the former featherweight champion, said at Shelby, before the Dempsey-Gibbons fight. "If he had not been persistent enough and game enough to brave criticism and force the promoters to give him real money, champions still be working for pork-and-bean wages. He argued that the fighters made the show and that they were entitled to make at least as much as the promoters and he got away with it."

Kilbane was crafty enough to do his own managing and Johnny Dundee, the present featherweight champion, has also handled himself for several years. It is argued that Dundee would have made much more money if he had someone to handle his affairs with a little more push.

MISS BROCKWAY

WILL PLAY AT L. A. ORGAN RECITAL

Next Monday evening, October 1, at 8:15, an organ recital will be given at the First Presbyterian church, 20th and Figueroa streets, Los Angeles, by members of the American Guild of Organists. One of the artists will be Miss Mildred Brockway of 221 Richmond avenue, Glendale, who will play "Sonata in D Flat" by Rheinberger; "Meditation" by Smart; "Marche Royale" by R. G. Halling.

It was a hot, sultry day in a great city, says a contributor in Judge. Seven cars were lined up in front of a busy filling station. Third from the end stood a leaking, steaming, rattling little five-passenger. In due time the line dwindled and the little five-passenger found itself parallel with the gas pipe. "How many?" the man asked impatiently. "One," answered Mr. Fly with the air of a Rockefeller. "One? What cha' trvin' to do? Wean it?"

FINAL REHEARSAL
"PETTICOAT LANE"
SPEAKS SUCCESS

The curtains were drawn; Mr. Lucien Danni struck the final chord of the grand finale; the players, released from the strain of remembering parts, began to chatter among themselves, and the dress rehearsal for "Petitcoat Lane" was ended.

Each of the few spectators voted strongly for the De Molay musical comedy which is to be presented at the Tuesday Afternoon club next Monday and Tuesday with a cast including—Paul Morgan, Marie Hearnshaw, Claude Whitfield, Valera Trimmer, Elmer Fitz, Hazel Linklog, Howard Elliott, Catherine Guthrie and numerous others—all of whom are well known Glendale young people.

Mrs. Lucien Danni, who, with her husband, a well-known composer, has worked hard during the last three weeks to get "Petitcoat Lane" into presentable shape, spoke encouragement to all. "It," she said, "you will only do as well next week as you have done tonight, you need have no fears as to the success of your play."

SWEET SPIRIT
BELLS JANGLE
IN PERFECT TUNE

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 29. (United Press)—zycterous bells which ring in melodious symphony, chiming their sweetness each mid-night, but coming from nowhere in particular, are distracting residents of an Everett street lodging house.

A whole crew of detectives has been called in to probe the secret, yet all admit their inability to determine from whence comes the mysterious concerts which have caused residents in the house to lose sleep and begin to think in terms of spooks and other mystic visitors.

Mrs. Della Amidon, the landlady, laughs at the theory that the house is infested with spirits, yet she is as much at a loss as the officers, when it comes to determining the cause of the phenomenon.

All wiring in the house has been gone over by Detective-Lieutenant Harvey Thatcher and his men, garrets, cellars and every nook and cranny investigated, to no avail. Each night the music is heard, low sounding bell ringing, chiming no particular tune, but none the less musical and sweet.

The janitor, who lives in the cellar, declares the music comes from the main floor above. The residents on the ground floor say the sound drifts down to them from the second story, and the second story dwellers say they hear it coming from below.

The officers admit their inability to trace the noises, and when questioned, shrug their shoulders and declare that ferreting out bootleggers is a cinch compared to finding the cause of the midnight concerts.

SYNOPSIS

One of the most popular studios in the quarter Latin was that of the three young English artists, Taffy, the Laird and Little Billee. Svengali, a long-haired, shabby-looking musician, was playing for them one afternoon when the door opened and a strange figure appeared, a girl clad in a soldier's overcoat, short petticoat and huge slippers, her ankles showing above them.

She was Trilby O'Ferrall, a model—posing for the sculptor downstairs. She had just come to listen to the music; she said. However, she stayed to talk and to contribute to the entertainment. She sang for them—and disclosed the horrible fact that she was tone-deaf. Though possessing vocal power in quantity and in really fine quality, she was utterly unable to hit a true note.

But if Trilby's voice was without charm, she herself was not. She had fine features, beautiful eyes, and a perfectly formed foot, which was sought as a model by all the artists in the quarter.

Trilby's father had been a gentleman, but a drunkard; her mother a bar-maid. Upon their death her only legacy was a small brother, of whom she was passionately fond, and whom she supported by becoming first a laundress and later a model.

Trilby soon became a frequent and welcome visitor at the studio. Here she occasionally met Svengali, who from the first had openly tried to capture her interest.

Svengali lived in a dilapidated garret. He was always unkempt and dirty, always bad-mannered, always poor and always borrowing.

Going to call on Little Billee one fine morning to borrow two hundred francs, he found that young gentleman in his bath, a sight which so amused and astonished him that he accepted a five-franc loan without protest.

Part II—Continued

Content with this, tante de mieu, the German asked him when he would be trying to get himself clean again, as he would much like to come and see him do it.

"Demand matang, a votre sair-ece!" said Little Billee, with a courteous bow.

"What! Monday too! Gott in Himmel you try to get yourself clean every day?"

And he laughed himself out of the room, out of the house, out of the Place de l'Odéon—all the way to the Rue de Seine, where dwelt the "Man of Blood," whom he meant to propitiate with the story of that original, Little Billee, trying to get himself clean—that he might borrow another five-franc piece, or perhaps two.

As the reader will no doubt anticipate, he found Taffy in his bath too, and fell to laughing with such convulsive laughter, such twistings, screwings, and doublings of himself up, such pointings of his dirty finger at the huge naked Briton, that Taffy was offended, and all but lost his temper.

"What the devil are you cackling at, sacred head of pig that you are? Do you want to be pitched out of that window into the Rue de Seine? You filthy black Hebrew sweep! Just you wait a bit; I'll wash your head for you!"

And Taffy jumped out of his bath, such a towering figure of righteous Herulean wrath that Svengali was appalled, and fled.

"Donnerwetter!" he exclaimed, as he tumbled down the narrow stair-case of the Hotel de Seine; "what for a thick head! what for a pig-dog! what for a rotten, brutal, ver-fuchter kerk of an Engländer!"

Then he paused for thought. "Now I will go to that Scottish Engländer, in the Place St. Anatole des Arts, for that other five-franc piece. But first will I wait a little while till he has perhaps finished trying to get himself clean."

So he breakfasted at the cremerie Souche, in the Rue Clopin-Clopant, and, feeling quite safe again, he laughed and laughed till his very sides were sore.

Two Engländerers in one day—as naked as your hand!—a big one and a little one, trying to get themselves clean!

He rather flattered himself he'd scored off those two Engländerers. After all, he was right perhaps, from his point of view: you can get as dirty in a week as in a lifetime, so what's the use of taking such a lot of trouble? Besides, so long as you are clean enough to suit your kind, to be any cleaner would be priggish and pedantic, and get you disliked.

Just as Svengali was about to knock at the Laird's door, Trilby came down-stairs from Durlen's, very unlike herself. Her eyes were red with weeping, and there were great black rings round them; she was pale under her freckles.

"Tous afez du chacrin, matemoiselle!" asked he.

She told him that she had neuralgia in her eyes, a thing she was subject to; that the pain was maddening, and generally lasted twenty-four hours.

"Perhaps I can cure you; come in here with me."

The Laird's ablutions (if he had listened in any that morning) were evidently over for the day. He was breakfasting on a roll and butter, and coffee of his own brewing. He was deeply distressed at the sight of poor Trilby's sufferings, and offered whiskey and coffee and ginger-nuts, which she would not touch.

Svengali told her to sit down on the divan, and sat opposite to her, and bade her look him well in the white of the eyes.

"Recartez-moi bien tans le blanc des yeux."

He made little passes and counterpasses on her forehead and down her cheek and neck.

(Arthur Edmund Carewe as Svengali and Andrea Lafayette as Trilby)

Dusseldorf), and Svengali said to him in German: "See, she sleeps not, but she shall not open her eyes. Ask her."

"Are you asleep, Miss Trilby?" asked the Laird.

"No."

"Then open your eyes and look at me."

She strained to open her eyes, but could not, and said so.

Then Svengali said, again in German, "She shall not open her mouth. Ask her."

"Why couldn't you open your eyes, Miss Trilby?"

She strained to open her mouth and speak, but in vain.

"She shall not rise from the divan. Ask her."

But Trilby was spellbound, and could not move.

"I will now set her free," said Svengali.

And lo! she got up and waved her arms, and cried, "Vive la Prussel me! Vive la guerrie!" and in her gratitude she kissed Svengali's hand; and he leered, and showed his big brown teeth and the yellow whites at the top of his big black eyes, and drew his breath with a hiss.

"Now I'll go to Durlen's and sit. How can I thank you, monsieur? You have taken all my pain away."

"Yes, matemoiselle. I have got it myself; it is in my elbows. But I love it, because it comes from you. Every time you have pain you shall come to me, 12 Rue Tire-Lard, au sixieme au-dessus de l'entresol, and I will cure you and take your pain myself."

"Oh, you are too good!" and in her high spirits she turned round on her heel and uttered her portentous war-cry, "Milk below!" The very rafters rang with it, and the piano gave out a solemn response.

"What is that you say, matemoiselle?"

"Oh! it's what the milkmen say in England."

"It is a wonderful cry, matemoiselle—wunderschon! It comes straight through the heart; it has its roots in the stomach, and blossoms into music on the lips like the voice of Madame Alboni—voce sulle labbre! It is good production—c'est un cri du coeur!"

Trilby blushed with pride and pleasure.

"Yes, matemoiselle! I only know one person in the whole world who can produce the voice so well as you! I give you my word of honor."

"Who is it, monsieur—yourself?"

"Ach, no matemoiselle! I have not that privilege. I have unfortunately no voice to produce. . . . It is a waiter at the Cafe de la Rotonde, in the Palais Royal; when you call for coffee, he says 'Boum!' in basso profundo. Tiestimme—F. moi below the line—it is phenomenal! It is like a cannon—a cannon also has very good production, matemoiselle. They pay him for it a thousand francs a year, because he brings

LEGION NEWS

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.—Preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion.

Don Packer was called upon to preside at the meeting of the Glendale post, American Legion, Friday night and made good in creditable shape, Commander Day being kept at home by the illness of Mrs. Day. By way of program Peter L. Perry gave a very interesting account of his trip to Mexico as a member of the chamber of commerce excursion.

Comrade Silver, chairman of the membership committee, reported four additions to the post roster, one of them being Comrade Butler, who is being transferred from the Paris, France, post to Glendale.

The chairman of the banquet committee reported arrangements as far as perfected for that social affair to be held October 26 and to which all members and ex-service men will be welcome.

There was some discussion of boxing events sanctioned by the American Legion and the matter was referred to the executive committee with instructions to report at the next post meeting.

One of the events of the evening was the presentation to the post of a broom which had been made by Comrade Randall Lindsay who has charge of the Glendale Press news stand at Brand and Broadway and who is totally blind. A communication was read from state headquarters giving particulars in regard to the national convention to be held in San Francisco October 13 to 19, and the post was notified that delegates to the convention would probably be expected at the next meeting.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Opening of government veterans' hospitals to former service men regardless of whether their disabilities are of service or of non-service origin likely will be adopted as a permanent policy in the opinion of President Coolidge.

Such a proposal was presented to the president several days ago by a delegation representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars and has appealed to the president as worthy of consideration. The delegation suggested that the government hospitals be opened to veterans of all wars and for all sorts of disabilities.

There are thousands of vacant beds in veterans' hospitals. "Inasmuch as it often is difficult to ascertain whether the disability of a former service man is of service origin and as the determination of such a point sometimes works an injustice to veterans, the president believes that it would be a beneficial policy to open up the hospitals. He feels that congress would approve such a step."

An inspection tour of Veteran Bureau institutions in the West will be made next month by Director Hines. He will inspect institutions of the bureau of California and look over proposed sites for a tuberculosis hospital in the southern part of that state.

Mr. Hines will address the American Legion convention at San Francisco, October 16 or 17.

AT THE THEATERS

LAST SHOWINGS OF "OUT OF LUCK" AT THE GLENDALE

Edward Sedgwick, Universal director, has a theory that some of the funniest situations in the world are perfectly natural situations of every day life if you can see the humor of them. The weight of his theory is proved in "Out of Luck," a comedy-drama starring Hoot Gibson, which has its last showings today at the Glendale Theater.

Sedgwick wrote the story and directed the filming of the play. The play depicts the cowboy star in the role of a gambler in the U. S. Navy. One sequence called for Hoot to get into a navy hammock. When a sailor can do that with grace he's "sea-going." Hoot's attempt affords one of the biggest laughs of the play—and it was perfectly natural—not a fraction of fake situation.

Norma Talmadge has troubles of her own in "She Loves and Lies," an adaptation of Wilkie Collins' famous novel, which opens at the Glendale Theater Sunday. Not only is she called upon to assume the roles of a young actress, a frequenter of Greenwich Village, New York's famous Bohemian quarter, and an old lady of fifty-two, but she must play the latter part so well that she can land a husband of about half her age—and she gets away with it. "She Loves and Lies" is one of those plays that interests at the start, grows in suspense and ends with a climax that contains a surprise. Miss Talmadge has the best opportunity of her career for comedy work, and shows that she is talented in this line as well as emotional roles.

Conway Tearle, as her handsome husband, also has a role well suited to his talents and is an admirable foil to the fun of the star. The rest of the cast is excellent.

"TRILBY" SCENES AND CAST ARE ALL TRUE TO FORM

Richard Walton Tully's screen production of "Trilby," which has its last showings today at T. D. & L. Theater, was staged by a producer, director and cast thoroughly familiar with the locale of this famous story.

Mr. Tully, James Young, who directed the picture, and Wilfred Buckland, art director, all have spent several years in the Montmartre district of Paris. Conrad Tritschler, the famous English scenic artist, also has resided in Paris. Rose Dione, one of the members of the cast, formerly played at the head of her own company in France.

Andree Lafayette, the charming lead of this all-star cast, came to America direct from the French metropolis, as did also Maurice Cannon, who plays Zouzon, and Max Constant, the Dodo of the play.

Pola Negri's second American made Paramount picture, "The Cheat," a George Fitzmaurice production with Jack Holt featured as leading man and Charles de Roche in support, opens at the T. D. & L. Theater Sunday.

The second screen version of this immensely popular story, which was produced about eight years ago by Cecil B. DeMille, has been entirely rewritten and modernized and now offers tremendous opportunities for highly dramatic acting to the principals. It is an ideal screen vehicle, and Fitzmaurice has made the most of it, the action throughout being staged with much realism. Miss Negri's far-famed emotional acting was never more wonderful.

DOROTHY GISH KNIFED TO DEATH AT THE GATEWAY

For the first time in her career, Dorothy Gish is stabbed to death in the movies. The incident takes place in the Richard Barthelmess picture, "The Bright Shawl," which is shown for the last times at the Gateway Theater tonight.

She is seen in the principal feminine role as a vivacious Andalusian dancer and the part is said to mark her greatest screen triumph to date. Miss Gish says it was quite a novelty not to find herself in the hero's arms in the closing reel. Another screen heroine (Mary Astor) enjoys that privilege.

"Business Before Pleasure" is a motto that often holds away even in the motion picture business. When Lew Cody arrived in Los Angeles to play the title role in the big Selznick production, "Rupert of Hentzau," which will be shown at the Gateway Theater, starting Sunday, September 30, he was surprised to find Director Victor Heermann waiting for him at the depot. "Mighty nice of you to take the trouble to come down to meet me," said Lew. "I didn't think there would be a soul here."

"Never mind the social chatter," replied Heermann; "I am down here to rush you over to the studio to make some scenes for 'Rupert of Hentzau,' and you are two hours late already."

Self is lost to the individual who assumes the airs of others.

SILVER LAKE TERRACE IS NOW HOME LOVER'S OPPORTUNITY

THIS WONDER TRACT IS FILLING WITH BUYERS WHO REALIZE SURE VALUES

Situated in the Northwest Part of Los Angeles This Tract is Within Three Miles of Center of That City—15 Minutes from Courthouse

ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS IN THIS TRACT

Every Homesite Commands a Wonderful View, For It Is High Above Surrounding Country—Up Where the Air is Pure and the Birds Sing

Situated as it is in the northwestern section of Los Angeles on some of the best land within the three-mile circle available for subdivision purposes, Silver Lake Terrace offers unusual opportunities for profitable real estate investment, according to George W. Dickinson, head of the syndicate subdividing the property.

The tract embraces both hillside and level lots, lying just south of Silver lake. Sunset boulevard passes within two blocks of the tract. Silver Lake Terrace is less than 15 minutes ride from the court house, by actual test, Dickinson asserts.

"This proximity to downtown Los Angeles is important to those considering an investment in Silver Lake Terrace for two particular reasons," Dickinson said. "The first reason is that, being so near the center of things, the lots will soon be in even greater demand than at present. The time is not far off when a lot within 15 minutes' ride of Sixth and Broadway will be very difficult to obtain at any price we would now consider reasonable.

"The second reason is that there will be an overwhelming demand for flats, apartments, bungalow courts and double houses by the people who must go downtown every day to work. Whether one has a machine or must ride on the street cars, after a hard day's work it is tiresome to have a long trip to make before home is reached.

"Residence income property has always been a good form of investment in Los Angeles, and even though the city is growing to be more and more of a city of individual homes there will never be a time when renters will be scarce."

The improvements being installed in Silver Lake Terrace embrace concrete streets and drives, cement sidewalks and curbs, sewers, water, gas and electricity. The work is already well under way, Dickinson reports, and every effort is being made to have them completely installed as soon as possible, so that those who wish to build immediately made do so.

The concrete streets and drives add greatly to the value of the lots by eliminating the annoyance and expense of periodic repairs. Although the initial cost is considerably more than that of ordinary streets, the wearing qualities are such that practically no upkeep cost will be encountered. The improvements including the concrete streets are all to be installed and paid for by the syndicate subdividing Silver Lake Terrace.

"Many who have visited Silver Lake Terrace express surprise that lots practically in the heart of Los Angeles can be so situated as to command a view of mountains and distant ocean. In addition, most of the lots overlook Silver Lake. Each lot offers distinctive opportunities for individuality in the building and in the arrangement of the grounds. This, combined with the marvelous outlook is an inducement that cannot be easily resisted by the man or woman who wishes to have the home express his or her individual tastes," said Dickinson.

Silver Lake boulevard, which passes directly through Silver Lake Terrace and is to be eighty feet wide and of concrete, will be a part of the new highway projected by the city to connect Pasadena, Los Angeles and the beaches. This highway will eliminate the necessity of going through the congested downtown district and will carry practically all the traffic between these points. This will greatly increase the value of property in Silver Lake Terrace, Dickinson believes.

From Glendale, the tract may be easily reached by going south on Glendale boulevard to Berkeley street, then turning west drive the short distance to the tract. By street car, one can transfer from

NATIONAL BODY WILL GIVE AID

Will Help to Put Over
Own-Your-Home
Shows

An advisory service to bring Own Your Home expositions in cities all over the country to the highest pitch of success in their function has been established by the National Association of Real Estate Boards upon approval of the executive committee. A meeting of the committee to pass on the association's plan of activities for the opening fall and winter season has just been concluded at national headquarters, Chicago. The service will put expert direction and the widest possible experience in exposition methods within the reach of even the smallest city that undertakes this plan of bringing before its citizens the possibilities for family enjoyment in home ownership, and the ways in which the home-owning ambition can best be satisfied.

A national clearing house for exposition dates will be opened at association headquarters, Chicago, and a license plan for expositions under real estate board auspices will be put into effect. Under the plan it is expected that there will grow up a national Own Your Home exposition circuit, or several sectional circuits, in which local enterprises will gain in strength through the attraction to them of exhibits prepared for national use.

A questionnaire to all boards within the association to ascertain their exposition plans for the present year has been sent out this week. Boards applying to the National association for a license and complying with the regulations and standards for licensed expositions will receive the advisory service, publicity help, model regulations for the exposition and model forms for applications and contracts for exhibits. The license fee makes the undertaking self-sustaining.

Bartholomew O'Toole of Chicago is chairman of the committee which will direct the association's Own Your Home service. An advisory board of professional managers of expositions as they have been given in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, and Indianapolis will work with the committee.

Present at the executive committee meeting which authorized the service as one of the new forms of association activity for the coming year were: President L. F. Epich, Denver; president-elect H. R. Ennis, Kansas City; Byron R. Hastings, Omaha; Chas. G. Edwards, New York City; Paul E. Stark, Madison; member of the committee for this meet, Wm. H. Ball, Philadelphia, secretary of the association, Hiram S. Cody, Chicago, treasurer, and H. U. Nelson, Chicago, executive secretary.

JUBILEE TO BE HELD OVER MEASURES

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 29.—California real estate men who are to meet in Sacramento October 10 to 13 for the nineteenth annual state convention of the California Real Estate Association, will hold a jubilee during the session of the convention over the successful application of modern real estate methods, which were enacted as amendments to the state real estate law at the last legislature.

With the laws now in effect results which indicate a raising of the plane of the real estate profession in California are already being observed, according to E. J. Morrissey, president of the Sacramento Realtors Association. These results are being carefully watched by the state association and will be reported on at the convention.

"California Real Estate men," declared Morrissey, "have every reason to be jubilant over the real estate laws now in effect in California for at their own suggestion the profession has been raised to a higher level in the amendments put into the state real estate law. The day of the crook and the sharper in real estate has been ended for all time by the enactment of these laws and the buying and selling public has an absolute assurance that he will find fair dealing at the hands of every licensed real estate broker."

Fully 1,000 real estate men and their wives are expected for the coming convention and the Sacramento Realtors Association is preparing an elaborate program of entertainment for the visitors, most of whom will come to Sacramento in auto caravans from other parts of the state.

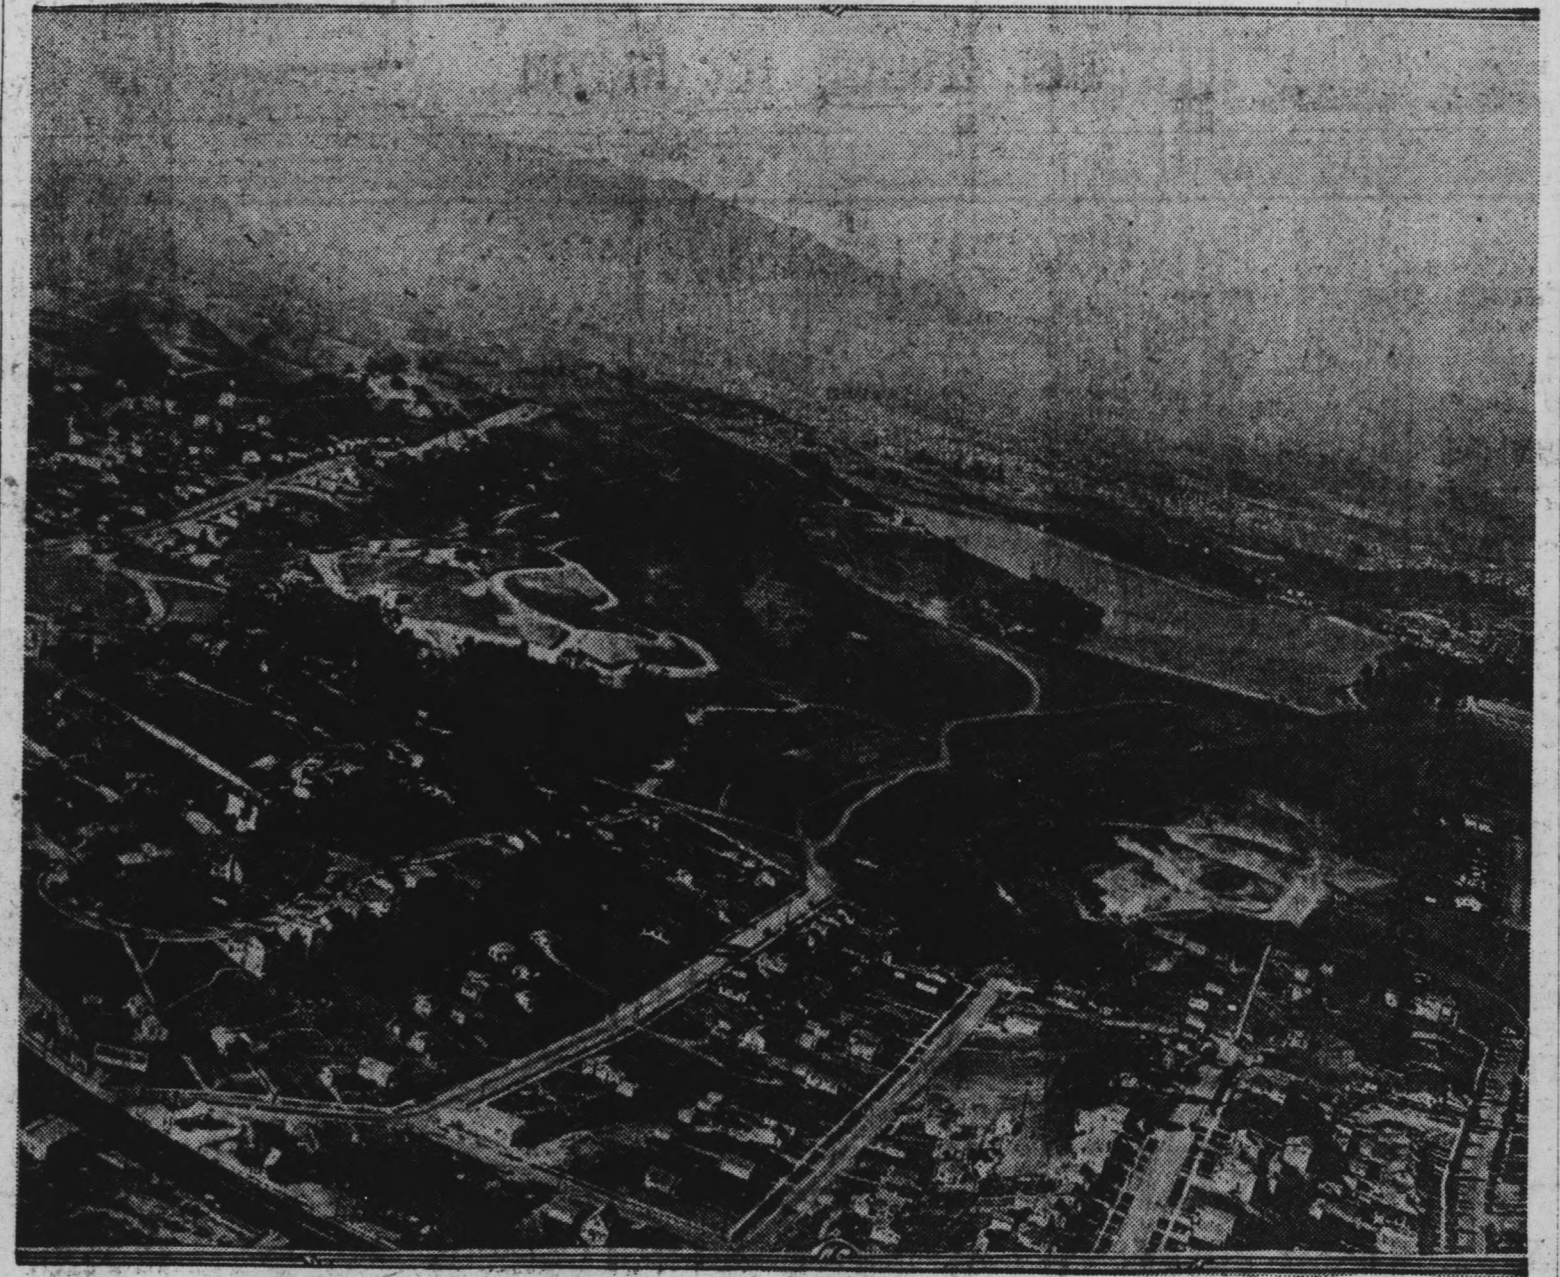

TOMATOES HIDE LOAD WHISKEY

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 29.—(United Press)—Police saw a truck stacked high with tomatoes and fruit, stop at a gasoline filling station. The observant sleuths noted the way the truck sagged, as though laden with something much heavier than fruit. The police investigated, and found beneath the tomatoes and fruit $10,000 worth of Scotch whiskey.

BEE STINGS, AUTO SPILLS

OROVILLE, Sept. 29.—(United Press)—A bee buzzed into the auto of Bennett Coffman, backed up to his hand eagerly and got ready to prod, when he swung at it. The bee, the auto and Coffman landed in the ditch. The bee did not sting, but Coffman was seriously hurt in the crash.

NATIONAL REALTY BOARD ADOPTS PLAN

Far-Reaching Scheme of Body O. K'd by Committees

Activities concerned with every phase of handling of real estate and of the advancement of real estate as a profession, are included in the program of work which has the Glendale car to any car going west on Sunset boulevard. Then, after getting off at Elk street, Silver Lake Terrace is but two short blocks just been approved by the association's executive committee. Digging out nationally the actual facts upon which intelligent courses of action in real estate matters must be built, development to the fullest of the public services which the real estate profession is giving, stimulation of the professional consciousness of real estate men through their local real estate boards, and circulation of the best ideas developed in modern real estate practice to reach to every member of its constituent boards, these make the great lines of the association's plan.

Activities approved include direct services to member boards, work for advancement of the real estate profession as a whole, undertakings of each of the seven great divisions of the association in their separate fields, cultivation of the public relations in which the association as the organ of the profession is giving national service, and assistance to the state organizations through which real estate interests are finding expression in matters affecting each state.

Work in which the association will act for the real estate profession as a whole includes:

Work for a uniform mortgage law and for adoption in other states of the Indiana plan of checking reckless bond issues and tax levies.

Making of a rental survey of residential property in American cities, to help solve housing and construction problems. Business research to be undertaken also includes study of cost of conducting a real estate business, and general surveys of the real estate conditions nationally this fall and the coming spring.

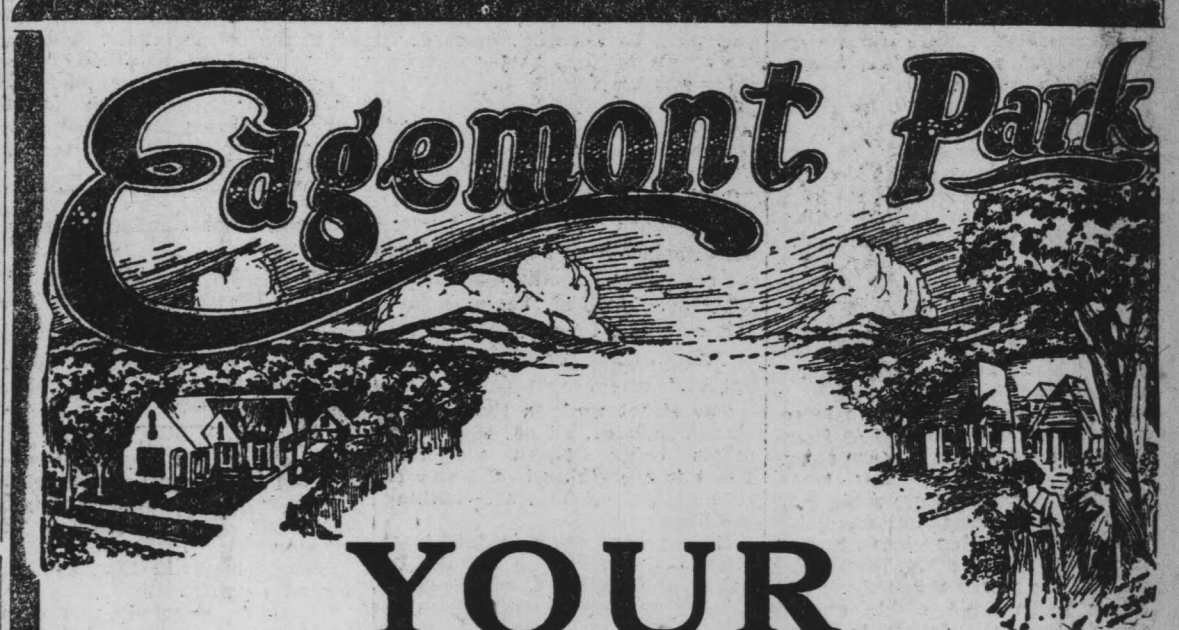

Movement toward national standardization of real estate education, with the calling soon of a national conference with heads of schools and universities on development of real estate courses for professional preparation.

Advancing value of the association's membership designation,

"Realtor," by legal action to maintain exclusive rights in the word, by making Realtor emblems available for member use, and by preparing board advertising of the term.

Active advance in definition and enforcement of the association's code of business ethics.

Notable divisional activities include: Study of the whole process of financing as it relates to facilitating and safeguarding investment in real estate. This study, in 22 specific fields of investigation, is being carried on through the association's mortgage and finance division. Study of critical questions of farm valuations, farm financing and farm legislation and taxation, through the association's farm lands division. Study of sound city building in new subdivisions, to be carried on in four investigations by the homebuilders and sub-dividers division. Study of brokers ethics, of commission rates, and of long term leases, to be carried on by association's brokers division.

CAMPBELL HEIGHTS IS COMMANDING ATTENTION

Cream of Realty Offerings
Is Most Charming
in Valley

Campbell Heights is the last word—the very last word—in high class subdivisions. It is among the choicest of the real estate cream of the valley. This claim has been made for many of the pieces of real estate in this valley, and in a more or less degree, the assertions have been correct, but when you are talking of Campbell Heights you are speaking of a tract that can hardly be equalled in the valley.

This tract is located on the beautiful slopes of the south side of the green Verdugo hills. Can more be said? If one should write a volume on the subject would the effect be more conclusive or striking? The Verdugo hills are known throughout the western part of this country as among the most beautiful in the world. Their appealing features are tremendous, their attractions are without number, their beauty beyond description.

Campbell Heights nestles cozily at the foot of the central portion of these magnificent hills. In fact, this tract is a part of the Verdugo range, which is saying all that can be said with regard to its location. In addition to affording an unsurpassed view of the hills every lot in this tract also provides a wide panorama of the extensive San Fernando valley, the view extending for miles and miles in every direction. This is in every particular a wonder tract.

The lots in this tract are large, none having less than 58 feet frontage and most of the lots are covered with full-bearing fruit trees. The lots themselves are a big feature, but the prices that are being asked are nothing less than a knockout. These range from $2500 up. At the prices asked these lots are a pickup and within two or three years will double in value. Agreeable terms may be arranged on anything in this subdivision.

"The demand for these lots is extremely gratifying," said Arthur Campbell, exclusive agent, and who with Daniel Campbell, is owner of the tract. "With hardly any effort in the way of advertising or publicity we have sold about $50,000 worth of the property, and those who have purchased are sending others."

"Buyers are purchasing these lots with the view of building on

Apiece to Lord, Find Boll-Weevil Spared Plots

Farmer members of the Arlington (Ga.) Baptist Church believe that a miracle has been added to the annals of the south. Seven members discovered at cotton picking time that the acre apiece they had dedicated to the Lord at the suggestion of their pastor was not only unscathed by the boll weevil—the bane of the cotton grower—but that the crop was much healthier in appearance and fibre than that of their other acreage, despite the fact that no preventative measures had been taken to combat the ravages of the hungry little insects. Following the revelation of the so-called miracle, the church has become the mecca of cotton growers from all over the state. Already 30 farmers have agreed to devote an acre apiece to the Lord next year.

them as soon as possible. A number of homes have been contracted for and plans for others are being prepared. None of these homes will cost less than $10,000. I am building a home for myself to cost $13,000."

The street work in the tract is almost finished, all of the pavements being 5-inch macadam. There is everything in the way of public utility on the tract—nothing has been omitted.

Recent purchasers in this tract include the following: E. G. McCulley of Hollywood, who secured 150 feet on Ben Lomond, where he will build soon.

Mr. Hayes of Los Angeles, recently of the east, purchased the corner of Ben Lomond and Cumberland, where he has a home under construction.

E. G. Courtney, a Chicago capitalist, who plans to build a 2-story structure on his property at once. Mr. Robinson of Long Beach, who secured a lot on Highland avenue and is now having plans drawn for a home.

Mrs. Z. C. Haggood of Glendale, who purchased the corner of Idle-wood and Cumberland as an investment.

Mrs. Elizabeth McPeck has bought a lot on Highland and will build soon.

A lot on Ard Eeven was purchased by Hugh R. Roberts of Hollywood, who is now having plans drawn for a home.

Addressing an assemblage of men the young parson said, brightly: "Every one here surely is more or less interested in psychology."

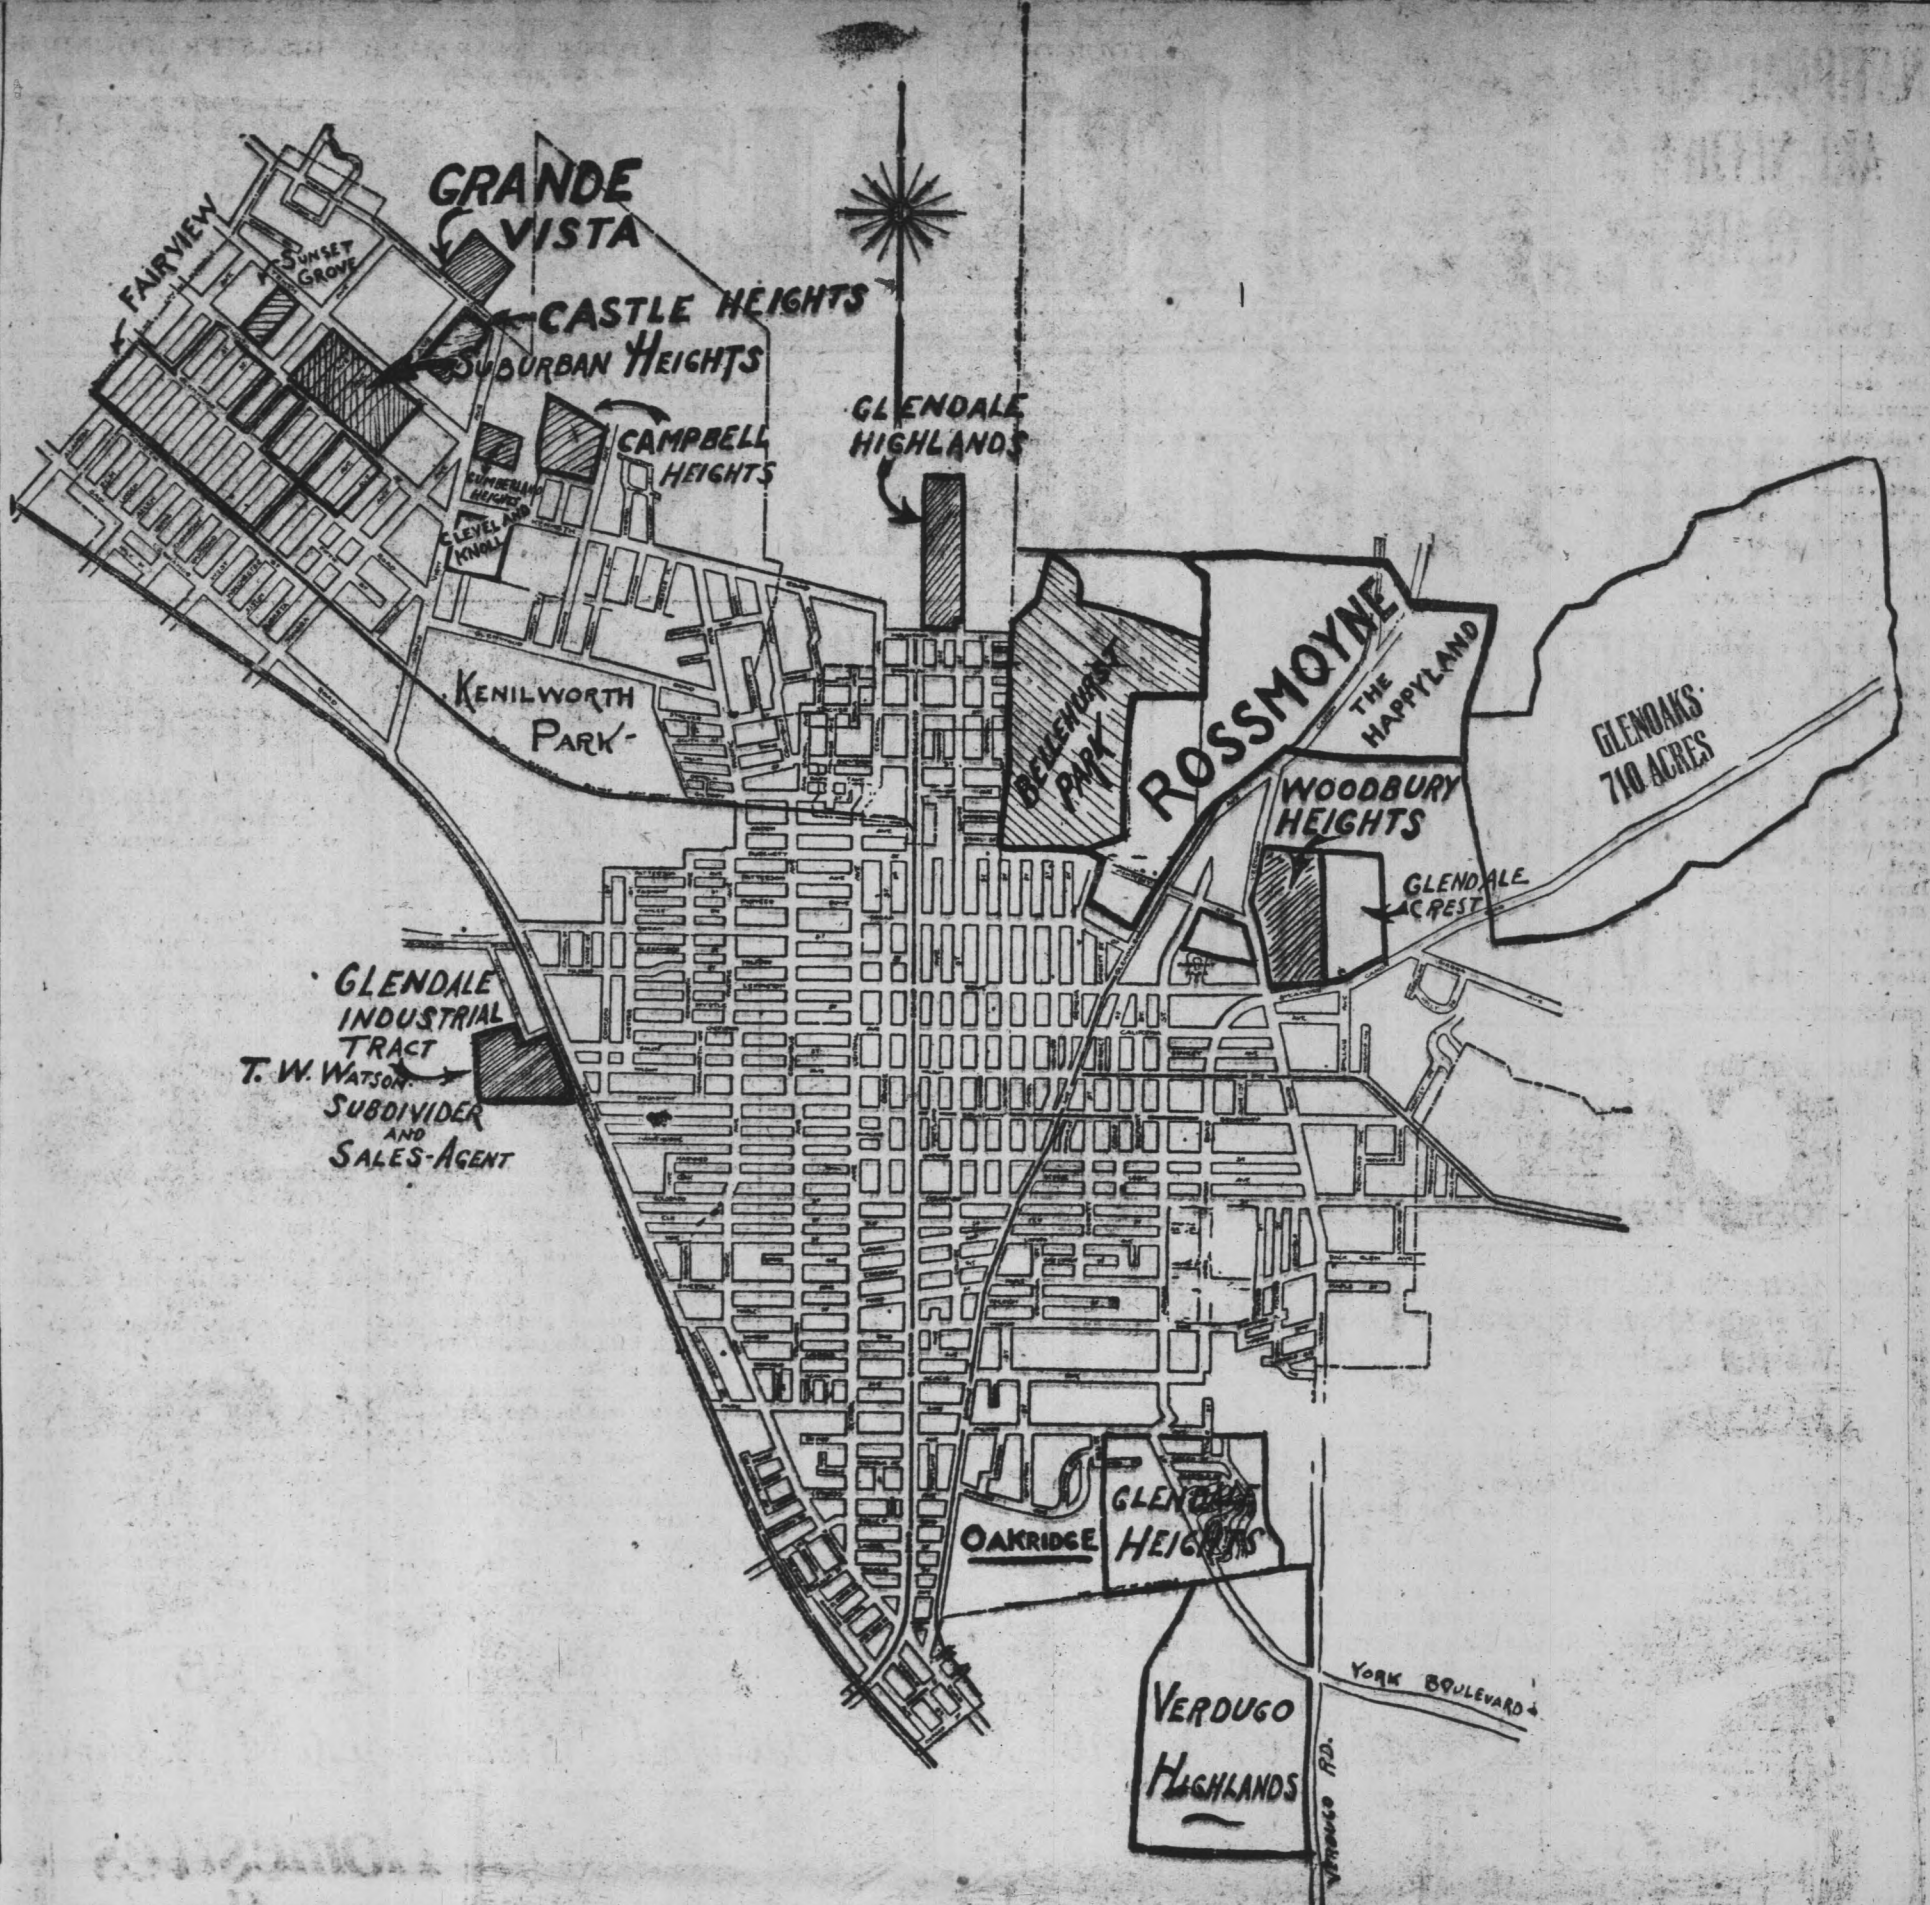

Every man in the audience laughed outright.

"I said," repeated the cleric gravely, "that probably every one here is interested in psychology."

The men roared with laughter. In despair, "the cloth" appealed to its chairman. What was the meaning of this unseemingly behavior?

It was explained that Psychology had won the So-and-So stakes a few days before.

NATIONAL ROADS ARE NEEDED IS CLAIM

"I believe in good roads, but I think it's a county matter. Neither the state nor the national government ought to have anything to do with roads."

That statement was made in all seriousness by an otherwise well-informed and able editor of a small town paper.

In reply he was asked to answer the following questions:

If the county and not the state, were the sole taxing power, what would become of state schools, state capitals, state developed waterways, state boards of health, state departments of agriculture and state courts?

If the county, and not the state, were the sole administrative unit, what would become of state militia, state police, state hospitalization, state charity, state insane asylums and prisons and state government?

If there is a function for the state to perform, why should the state not concern itself with the welfare of its citizens in the transportation which is so vital to all its other interests?

What would become of traffic, without state legislation? What would become of railroads, without state regulation?

Where the state has no control and the counties build the only roads, there is no system! The only states in the Union which have an adequate, logical and serviceable system of highways, are those which build, maintain and control the main trunk-line roads by means of a state road commission or board.

What is true of the state and the county, is true of the nation and the state.

Until there is a national highway commission, charged with the creation of a national highway system, the mileage of which will be built and maintained by the national government, there will never be, in this country which needs it so badly, a real interstate system of roads.

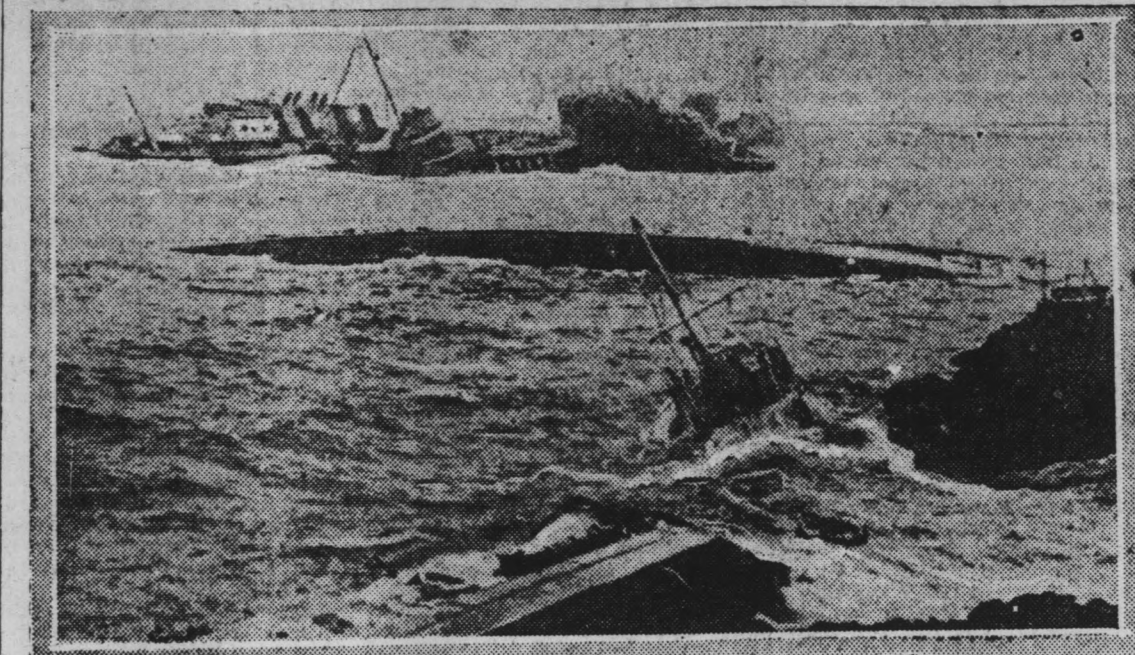

The badly informed editor? Oh, he hasn't been able to answer the questions yet!

This article was submitted by the National Highway association.

The Mudtown Amateur Dramatic society was holding its first field night. One of the recently-painted members had been allotted a part with exactly one sentence.

He was the headman, and, arrayed in all the glory of black tights and mask, he strode on the

FOUR OF THE SEVEN U. S. DESTROYERS IN PACIFIC DISASTER POUNDING ON THE ROCKS

This remarkable photograph shows four of the wrecked navy vessels smashing to pieces off Point Honda, Cal., 75 miles north of Santa Barbara. The Delphy crashed on the rocks first and the steady pounding of the treacherous sea soon split the destroyer in two. The hull can be seen in the foreground, with the bow farther up the coastline. Back of the Delphy is the Young, which was the second to pile up on the rocks, and farther out are two more of the fleet of seven.

JUDGE RULES MAH-JONGG CALLS FOR HIGH SKILL

[By Associated Press] MANILA, Sept. 29.—Mah-Jongg, the great Chinese game of dominoes, is not a game of chance. A competent court of the land has ruled thus, and it is so ordered. The above decision was rendered in a case against Teo Tong, Lee Loy, So Chee and Kuong Chang, all Chinese, arrested on the charge of gambling. The case came before Judge Manuel V. Moran, who based his decision on the case of the United States vs. Liong-sin. In his decision, however, Judge Moran regrets the fact that local authorities have not approved any measure regulating the game, as he believes that Mah-Jongg is a game in which fortunes may be won and lost. Judge Moran makes a lengthy analysis of the game in which he says that while the element of luck plays an important part in the winning of the hand, the game in itself is one of ability rather than luck. He concludes that the element of luck is limited, and as the game advances this element is more and more reduced by the proficiency of the player. His conclusion that in Mah-Jongg fortunes may be won or lost is based on a story in which it is related that four wealthy Chinese once played the game, wagering a grain of rice for each tile. The player playing East Wind, the story runs, pit over a master stroke by virtue of which his three opponents and their descendants for three generations had to cultivate 1,000 hectares (2,500 acres) of land planted to rice in order to pay what East Wind had won.

NORTHWEST PART OF CITY IS BEST

Ingledeue Realty Company Pins Faith on Residential Section

That the safest investment any one may make is the purchase of lots in the northwestern section of the city, is the belief of C. W. Ingledeue Realty company, which yesterday placed Cumberland Heights on the market.

The belief that this section of the city offers splendid opportunity to either the investor or the home seeker, was the incentive for opening the new tract, according to Mr. Ingledeue.

"Almost any land one purchases in Glendale offers a splendid opportunity," he declared. "But I firmly believe the northwestern section is the best. The value of lots in that neighborhood has advanced rapidly. It is still increasing. And every indication is that it will continue."

"Cumberland Heights" is the result of considerable study of this section. We have placed it on the market because we believe it offers the best opportunity in the city to the man who is seeking an ideal location upon which to erect a home, or to the man who purchases with a view to reselling in short time at a good profit. It will only be a matter of a short time until these lots will double in value. Others in the same neighborhood have, and "Cumberland Heights" really has more to offer than these.

"Cumberland Heights" is only a small tract. A dozen lots in all. And some of these have been taken on. The tract is certainly not going to last long at the prices asked. All improvements have been made and paid for. The tract is strictly of the highest class, and restricted. Already "Cumberland Heights," is surrounded by beautiful homes, and additional ones are going up every day. Situated at Grand View and Cumberland, first street above Kenneth road, on the beautiful slope at the foot of Mount Verdugo, and overlooking Glendale and the San Fernando valley, "Cumberland Heights" lies in a community in which anyone would be proud to live.

"And, if one will investigate the values of land in this section, one will readily see that 'Cumberland Heights' offers such a splendid investment that the lots in the tract certainly won't remain on the market at the low prices being asked now."

DOUGLAS FIR IS DECAYING FAST

Douglas fir is the most important timber tree in the Pacific Northwest and comprises nearly one-fourth of the merchantable timber of the United States. Because it is very susceptible to disease caused by four fungi which cause great loss to owners of overmature timber, the United States Department of Agriculture has made preliminary investigations to determine the extent of such damage and to formulate methods for more accurate estimation of the amount of defective timber. At present, estimates on Douglas fir stands are commonly very inexact, often resulting in heavy financial losses and costly litigation.

The results of the investigations so far made have been published in Department Bulletin 153, A Study of Decay in Douglas Fir in the Pacific Northwest, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Mechanical injuries are of little importance in relation to the entrance of decay. Knots were responsible for nearly 90 per cent of the volume of all decay in the trees studied. Fire scars were the entrance point for 4 per cent, and the remaining 1 per cent came in through other scars. Fire is the only factor which is controllable, so there can be but little reduction in the extent of decay in future stands by a reduction in the scars caused by controllable mechanical injuries.

It is a well established fact that young stands or second growth are relatively immune from decay, but it is not yet determined at what age in the life of the stand this immunity ceases and the trees become subject to extensive decay. Establishing this age will enable timber men in the future to cut stands before there is any real loss and at the same time permit the trees to attain the maximum size. Much information of value to owners of Douglas fir timber is included in this bulletin, a copy of which may be secured free of charge, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Willie Jones, the office boy, had a poor memory. One day his employer sent him upon an errand to the stationery store.

Entering the shop, Willie turned to the man behind the counter and remarked with a puzzled expression: "I can't remember what it was the boss sent me for!"

"Look around," suggested the clerk. "Perhaps you will see it on one of our shelves."

At that moment the man noticed a number of files on the ceiling. Seeing a broom, he made one sweep and the files disappeared.

"Ah, I have it!" exclaimed the boy. "Ceiling whacks!"

It is easier to pose as an optimist than it is to be one.

VALLEY MORTGAGE AND FINANCE CO. NOW A REALITY

Glendale has another financial institution which, judged by the long and favorable experience of its projectors, should prove a welcome addition to our local "Wall Street." The Valley Mortgage & Finance company, with an authorized capital of $500,000, became a reality a few days ago, and has moved for business at 211 East Broadway in Court No. 10.

Here a representative of the Press found Max L. Green and J. F. Lilly in active charge, sorting out a bunch of loan applications and looking very much pleased with the initial run of business. "It seems mighty good to be back in business here in Glendale again," said Mr. Lilly, the company's treasurer, who for many years was in the mortgage loan business here, leaving some four years ago to take up the distribution of the Nash line of cars in Kern county. "It was a great mistake for me to leave just when I did," continued Mr. Lilly, "but I am making amends by registering a solemn vow never to leave Glendale again until the grim reaper with his scythe removes me."

"I have had my eye on Max Green for a number of years," said Mr. Lilly, "and when I found him fast and loose and willing to enter this business with myself and Mr. Baird, I was very much pleased." The new company is fortunate in having as its first vice president Mr. A. L. Baird, widely known business man of Glendale, who has attained a successful success in the few years he has been in Glendale. Mr. Baird is equally interested financially with Mr. Green and Mr. Lilly in the company, but does not expect to change his present connection with the R. L. Kent company where, as manager of the realty and insurance department, he has built up a remarkable clientele. Mr. Baird successfully managed a large chain of retail stores before coming to Glendale, and has added to his laurels as a business executive since coming to California. His associates in the new venture express themselves as being gratified that they may command his counsel and advice in their plans.

Max Green, who will serve the organization as vice president and general manager, is a home product, reared on a farm in the La Canada district. For the past several years he has been selling automobiles, saving his profits, and wisely corraling a bunch of Glendale real estate. Mr. Green is therefore particularly fitted to manage the department of the company's business that has to do with auto finance, while his knowledge of realty values will also serve him well in the mortgage loan department.

Associated with these men, and also as members of the board of directors will be Dr. T. C. Young and Dan W. Green, a brother of Max Green. Dr. Young introduced himself to Glendale many years ago, and has crowded into those years a prodigious amount of hard work, and has been eminently successful, both professionally and in a business way.

Max Green is much better known in Los Angeles than in Glendale, though he still makes his home in the vicinity of Glendale. Mr. Green has been a newspaper man during most of his life, and in recent years has been publisher of two journals that serve the business and legal interests of Los Angeles, conducting a successful printing business as a side issue. He is making a considerable investment in the new company which he is to serve as director, and will be a valued adviser and counselor for his associates.

The officers state that the company will deal only in secured paper of approved worth. With such a policy, and with seasoned business men of large means and experience to pilot its course, the Press may safely predict for the new venture a useful and successful career.

CONTRA COSTA WILL SECEDE IF OLD CAR STOPS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—(United Press).—Romance, mirth, witfulness, joy and woe—all these are threatened in the towns of Alamo, Saranap, Diablo and Danville, in Contra Costa county.

It's the Toonerville trolley again. The Sacramento Short Line is threatening to abandon, abolish and forget the trolley. The good old car that's rattled along since it was shipped around the Horn in '32 or maybe a little later, has been drifting along the tracks for about 14 miles ever since. Alone it wanders through the dusk and dark, rattles, shakes, wheezes and clangs.

Since it was repaired in 1912 the communities along the line have boomed and the Chamber of Commerce of Alamo has prided himself upon having achieved something. He is going to fight the abatement of the car also.

Bill French, skipper of the Toonerville trolley, has served as clock, nurse-maid, guardian, delivery boy and counsel to all the inhabitants living within half a mile of either side of his route. The car itself is the official alarm clock of the neighborhood, and has had its name in the city papers half a dozen times the past year for arriving at the end of the line without the skipper having had to stop the critter and tie up some broken parts.

To take this car with the rattles, the wall, the squeak from Contra Costa county would be unjust, unkind and wicked the inhabitants say, and they're appealing to the state railroad commission against the plan of the Sacramento Short Line, with its plea to abandon the road.

BABSON CLAIMS SLOW PAYMENTS HINDER BUSINESS

Wellesley Hills, Mass., Sept. 29. 1923.—Roger W. Babson has been making a careful analysis of credit conditions based on reports from his various correspondents throughout the United States. His findings reported today are of unusual interest to all business men and investors.

"Careful students of the financial situation are surprised at the action of the 'Reserve Ratio Figures' of the Federal Reserve banks and the similar figure for the New York banks," says Mr. Babson. "With the tremendous amount of gold in the country and with new gold constantly being mined, it seems strange that this figure should decrease. Furthermore, even although this is the crop moving season there seems no logical reason why our banks should put out additional currency. There is an abundance of money in the country for all legitimate needs. The only difficulty is that too much is being hoarded in sections where it is not needed. The country does not need to issue more money, but the farmers and legitimate business instead of speculators in stocks, food stuffs, and wearing apparel should have the use of the billions already issued. Eliminate special and unreasonable storage and there will be money enough for every legitimate need in every line of industry."

"Yet this speculation in stocks and commodities does not account for the clogging which is taking place today in our credit system. Of the various reasons advanced I believe the fundamental difficulty is due to the fact that people are not paying their bills. Ever since the decline in business, which began a few months ago, there has been a tendency for manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, and consumers to slow up in their payment of bills. Of course, the whole thing is an endless chain. Just as soon as one link stops the entire chain must stop. As one link slows down, the entire chain must slow down. Yet there is absolutely no reason for such action. It is a psychological or moral condition rather than an economic condition. Business and the flow of money is like the flow of blood in one's veins. Anything which retards circulation harms everyone."

"An analysis of the balance sheets of our large industries shows that they are very largely 'made or unmade' by their 'Accounts Receivable,' which is simply the accountant's name for money being owed to them. For instance, the fertilizer business, as a business, is perfectly sound. Not only are fertilizers needed but they are needed more every year. It is a fundamental industry and yet most of the fertilizer companies are having very hard sledding at the present time, and their securities are selling very low. The reason primarily is that farmers are buying fertilizers on credit and are not paying their bills. The chain stores, on the other hand, are very flourishing today and their stocks are selling high. The main reason for this is that these chain stores are doing a cash business. They have no 'Accounts Receivable' and are able to discount their bills and carry large cash balances."

In the case of almost every corporation the credit policy is an important factor and any investor buying securities today should give it careful consideration. This is especially true today when industrial stocks are so much more popular than railroads and public utility stocks. Notwithstanding their troubles the railroads and public utilities do a cash business. This applies not only to transportation companies but also to lighting and telephone companies. "All of this means that one of the best things we can do to bring back prosperity is to promptly pay our bills. Moreover, this applies to wage workers as well as employers; to retailers as well as to manufacturers; to people in small country towns as well as to people in the large cities. The little bills must be paid before the big ones can be paid. Before the manufacturer can pay his bills, the wholesaler must pay the manufacturer; before the jobber can pay the wholesaler, the retailer must pay the jobber; and before the retailer can pay the jobber, you and I must pay him. Prompt settlements will do much toward keeping the business from going lower. The Babson chart now shows it at 16 per cent below normal."

There are more brain calms than brain storms.

ENLARGE MORMON TEMPLE TO HOLD GREAT CROWDS

[By Associated Press] SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 29.—Better to accommodate the thousands of Latter Day Saints who desire to enter the famous Salt Lake temple, there to perform sacred rites, approximately $100,000 is being expended by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to enlarge the outer buildings. Workmen have been busy for over a month and a few more weeks will see completion of the task.

In tunneling for new entrances to the temple portions of the original foundation laid about three-quarters of a century ago, were exposed. Inspection of the foundation shows that the temple builders took the precaution to make double arches of stone, the better to hold the weight of the top portion. Several prominent architects and builders have expressed amazement that such foresight was shown in the construction.

On some days upward of 1,500 church members enter the temple and with the old accommodations it was nearly impossible properly to take care of them. With the new extensions, however, which include larger office quarters for the church recorder and other officials, dining hall for temple attendants, dressing rooms and the like, no congestion is anticipated.

As nearly as possible the builders of the new additions have eliminated steps or support posts, so that blind or aged people may get about more easily. There is also a children's playroom, where women attendants will take charge of the children whose parents are in the temple.

The new construction work is on the north and west sides of the temple. It is located within an enclosure to which few non-Mormons are admitted, and then only with the permission of the higher authorities of the church.

INITIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS BRING WONDERFUL FLOOD OF BUYERS TO BELLEHURST

Gigantic Closing Out Sale That Was Put On By The Firm About a Week Ago Is Being Generously Responded To By Local Buyers

OLD THOM HOME IS BEING SOLD

Beginning Next Week The Campaign Will Be Extended To Outside Territory, And All Southern California Will Come Flooding Into This City

Following last week's announcement by the Walter H. Leimert company to Glendale only, the tremendous advertising campaign for Bellehurst Park starts this week in all the Los Angeles paper as well as in the Glendale papers.

According to Leimert, big response was received from last week's preliminary offering to Glendale. There are still, however, many fine lots left—some of them located where the old Bellehurst ranch house stood and where for 50 years the late Cameron Thom lavished every possible care, planting trees and shrubs in profusion, until today this part of Bellehurst Park is a place of wondrous beauty, covered with magnificent live oaks, tall palms, ornamental trees and shrubs—an artistic setting for homes that cannot be duplicated in all of beautiful Southern California.

But the overwhelming demand for Bellehurst property is not attributed by the Leimert company to its matchless beauty alone, but also to its ideal location in the exact geographical center of Glendale, the city of marvelous growth—splendid transportation facilities, its accessibility to schools and shops, and the carefully planned restrictions which absolutely safeguard its future.

Milton Coney, sales manager for Bellehurst Park, advises that all Glendale people who have not yet secured their lots should do so at once as the swarm of outside buyers due on this tract tomorrow will undoubtedly gobble up the remaining portion of the second unit.

WOODBURY HTS. LOTS ARE IN DEMAND

Woodbury Heights spells the last word on foothill subdivisions. During the past few years the grand scramble of those buying lots for home purchases has been for foothill homesites, and hillside locations that are "on the level" have been meeting with a wonderful reception. In fact, they have been snatched up just about as rapidly as they have been presented.

When the cry for "hillside lots" was first heard there were a few wise ones who said that the demand for property of that character would soon die out. They predicted that within a year or so those who bought lots in the foothills would soon be sorry they had made such purchases.

But what has been the result? Every lot in the foothill districts that has sold has created a demand for half a dozen other similarly located homesites. Those who have bought lots of this character have so conclusively seen the wisdom in their purchases that they have unconditionally advised their friends and relatives to do likewise. The result has been that instead of diminishing the demand has been growing. It has grown, in fact, until at this time the homesite without a view, that is not high above the surrounding country is second choice for residential purposes.

This is why Woodbury Heights, located on some of the most beautiful knolls on Verdugo road, is being so generously received. Since the announcing of this tract to the public last Friday quite a number of the lots have been sold and the demand for the sites in this particular tract is growing. These, at the original prices, will soon be a thing of the past.

This tract is located on Verdugo road, just north of Sycamore Canyon boulevard. It has 1200 feet frontage on Verdugo road. From the knolls on this tract an unobstructed view of the entire San Fernando valley may be obtained.

The T. W. Watson company, 708 East Broadway, is taking care of the sales end of this tract, which assures prospective purchasers honest and courteous treatment.

Why does the man in the moon practice economy? Because everything up there is so high.

New Homes in Belvedere Gardens

These three homes show type of dwellings that are going in at this wonder tract.

started people will come to realize that this highway, intersecting Whittier boulevard at Belvedere Gardens square, is certain to bring permanent activity to this tract. Most all interested, whether they contemplate buying for purely investment purposes or plan to build their home in this locality, are anxious about the new boulevard, but few can appreciate that this highway, ordered by the Regional Planning commission is about to be a reality.

For that reason I have made every effort to rush through work on this mountain to the sea highway, and can definitely state at this time that I feel almost certain that the work will start sometime this month. Pasadena boulevard has been described as the Western avenue of the east side, and we are going to do all in our power to make it live up to its description. Throughout the tract it will be lighted every 150 feet with beautiful ornamental lights, while in the center of the tract fronting on the boulevard we will dedicate and beautify a 3-acre park. When this

SECURITIES, TAX EXEMPT, WORK HARDSHIP

How present tax laws are working to make a special privileged group of millionaires disproportionately or even entirely relieved of the tax burden and contributing no capital to business enterprise, was brought out by H. R. Ennis, president-elect of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in an address before the seventeenth annual convention of the American Association of Title Men just concluded at Omaha.

Toleration in the American tax system of tax-exempt securities, Mr. Ennis pointed out, has made possible a flight from taxation on the part of men whose incomes come within the highest taxation brackets. The evil of the withdrawal of capital into tax exempt securities has two sides. It means that the time is rapidly approaching when many of the richest men of the country will be entirely relieved of the burden of taxation, throwing back the weight of the avoided tax on the rest of the population, rich and poor alike, and it means that while the idle capitalist puts his funds in tax-exempt securities and the working capitalist, who makes business enterprise possible, is penalized. Paralyzing of constructive investment is the natural result.

Romance of the growth of investment values in real estate from generation to generation is locked up every night in the safes that hold real estate title records, Mr. Ennis told the title men. He cited the history of the Astor family investments as illustrating the consistent quality of real estate advances.

"The Astors are one of the few families in this country who, from the beginning, have pinned their hopes to real estate, and increased their wealth, while others who sought false gods have not fared so well," Mr. Ennis said.

divisions. Because of this fact it not only offers the advantage of homestead land but the added advantage of being conveniently close to Los Angeles and places of employment. It is only 6.2 miles from Seventh and Broadway, and located on Whittier boulevard, making it accessible from any part of southern California.

GLENDALE HEIGHTS IS WONDER TRACT

Activity in the way of road grading is now going on in Glendale Heights, a wonderful tract of scenic homesites, located on Mountain street between Brand and Louise. During the past week or so the roadgrader has been right on his toes, the result being that the work of building roads in this wonderful tract is gradually rounding into shape.

It is the intention of T. W. Watson, 708 East Broadway, who is putting on this tract, to complete the improvements at the earliest possible moment. For this reason every effort is being put forward to complete these roads. The subdivisions of this tract are aware of the fact that only by completing the road system can the wonders of the lots for home purposes be fully demonstrated. The different views that are obtainable from this tract are beyond compare. There is nothing in the entire valley that can in any way surpass them. It would indeed be hard to stretch the imagination to the point of mentally picturing anything more ideal for home purposes than is this tract.

The lots in this subdivision range in price from $3000 to $9000, and all of them are large. These prices include everything in the way of improvements. The streets will be finished within 90 days, it is said, and before that time, it is predicted, a number of homes will have been started.

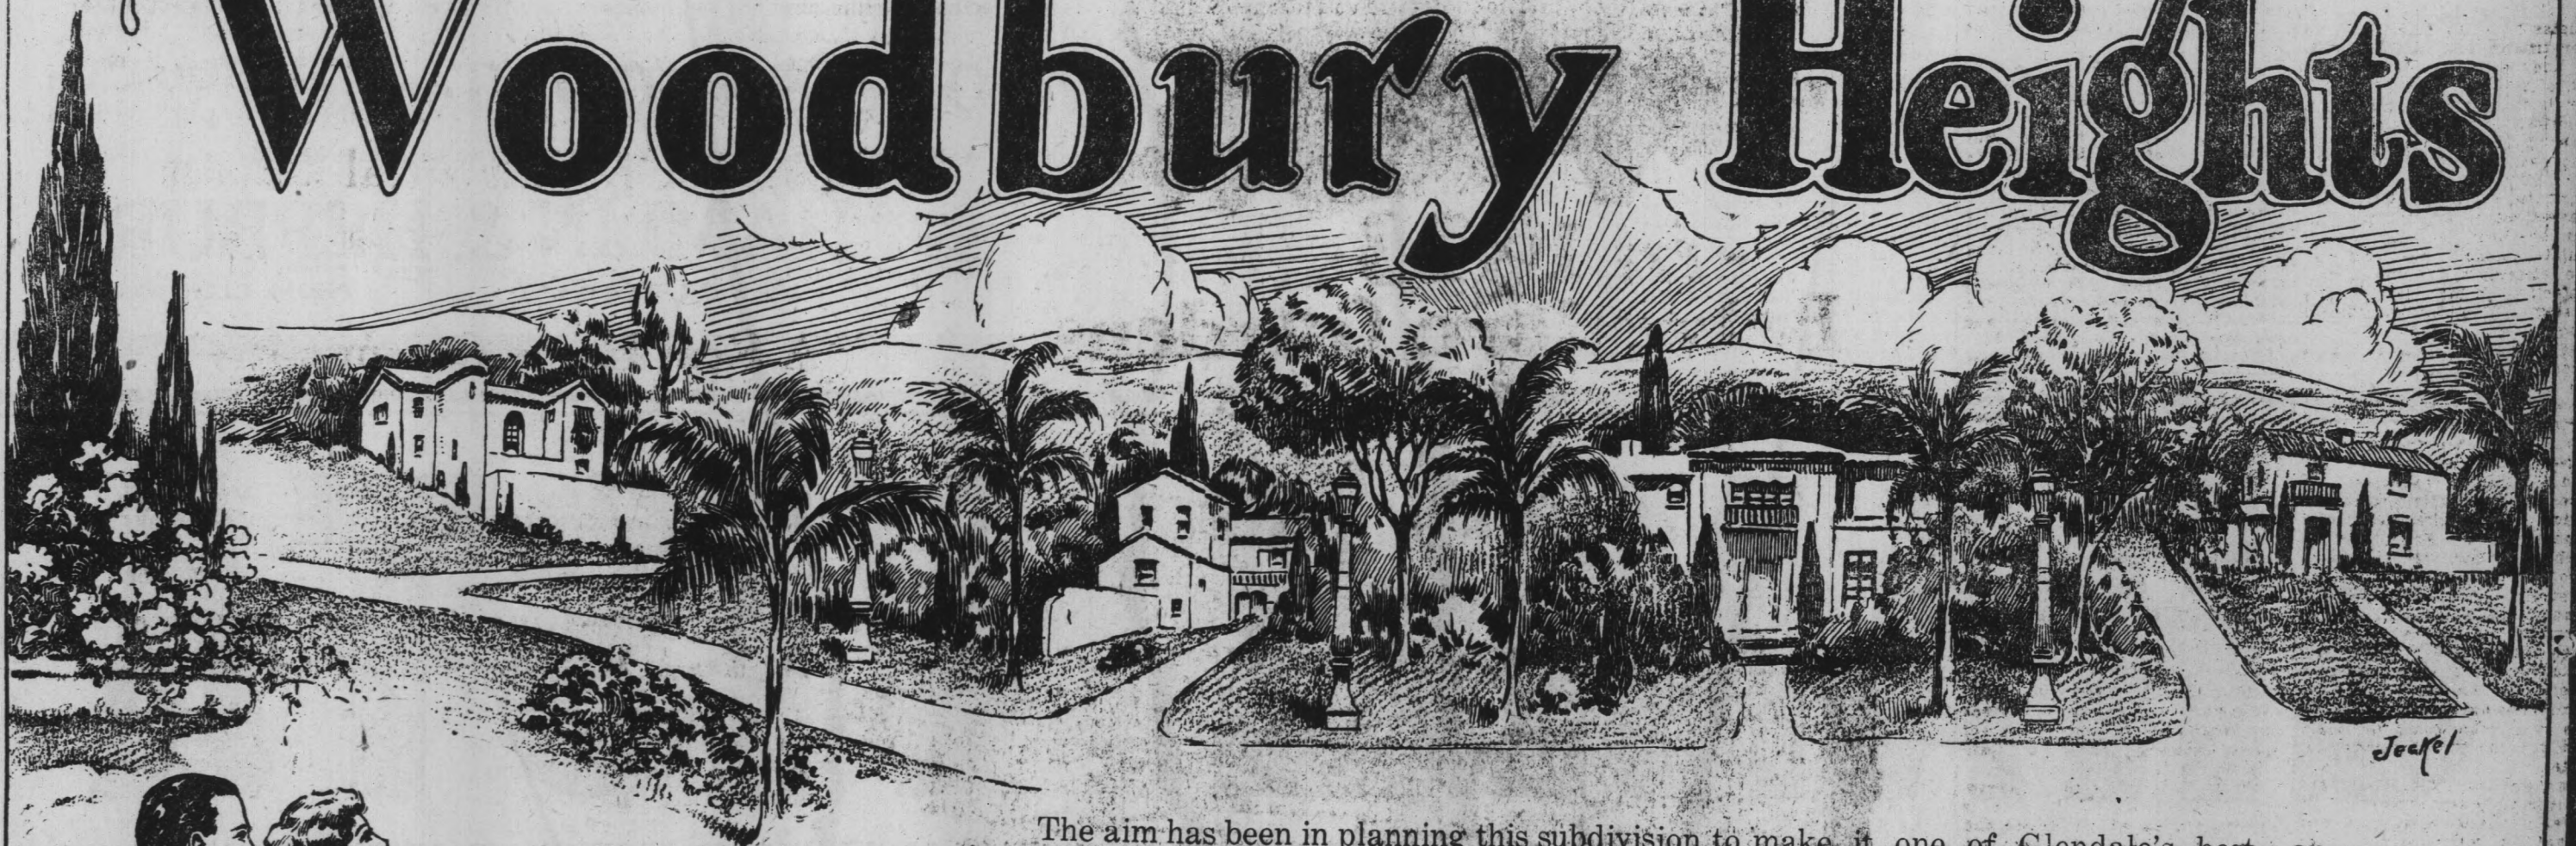

The first unit of 35 lots in this tract are being offered at this time. In this entire tract there are seventeen acres, every inch of which is extremely choice.

SEWING MACHINES FOR OLD MEXICO

[By Associated Press]

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico, Sept. 29.—A carload of sewing machines has arrived here from El Paso, Texas, consigned to Menonites at Bustillos. Other machines are to be sent to the Menonites at Santa Clara. The Menonites, it is said, have found a need for sewing machines, and intend to make their own clothing in order to avoid paying high prices in Mexican stores. This plan, it is said, will also save the import duty on finished materials imported from other countries.

Woodbury Heights

The aim has been in planning this subdivision to make it one of Glendale's best—an ideal home place.

It is indeed a pleasure to offer this attractive property to the discriminating seekers of homes in Glendale. Each lot is a jewel—charming location, beautiful view, complete improvements, carefully planned restrictions and nearness to business center, high school, street cars, bus lines and main boulevards are some of the many attractive features. Twelve hundred feet of frontage on Verdugo Boulevard gives accessibility, and a gentle rise toward the east and north gives each lot a commanding position and an unobstructed view, while encircling hills on the north and east provide a degree of seclusion that gives the tract an individuality of its own.

If you are looking toward the hills for a future home site, or an investment where Glendale values will surely increase, you are invited to let us show you this attractive property.

Sales to Be Checked for Income Tax Purposes

Special instructions were received from Washington yesterday by Collector Rex Goodcell to conduct an intensive income tax investigation drive beginning October 1, and continued without interruption until February 1.

Under specific orders from Commissioner Blair, the work of the field division will be so arranged that every field deputy who is qualified to make income tax investigations will take active part in the drive.

Transcripts of real estate transfers will be speeded up so that the field deputies may check the transfers with income tax returns filed for 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, and develop cases where profits in real estate were not reported in income returns.

Acting Chief Field Deputy Bates will visit every division headquarters in the Southern California district and give direct instructions to his deputies regarding the drive.

The four months drive is expected to develop millions of dollars in taxes that have been withheld by taxpayers. It will extend over the United States. Special instructions were given by Collector Goodcell that in the investigation to be made every effort should be made to conduct them with a minimum annoyance to taxpayers.

Where unreported income is disclosed by investigations made by field deputies under the law the maximum penalty must be imposed, but where the taxpayer voluntarily reports income on which no return was made, severe penalties will not be asserted, according to Collector Goodcell.

SILK SUITS

Extremely good looking are new silk suits in dark blue or beige with two-toned embroidery around the coat and sleeves.

YES, DREAMS ARE NOW COMING TRUE

Dreams are coming true at Grange Vista. Many folks during their whole lives, have dreamed and dreamed of a subdivision that is above the average, where they can build homes—good artistic homes—and be assured that the fellow on the next lot will not erect a shack. The lot owner wants to be assured that when he puts six, eight or ten thousand dollars into a dwelling that a $1,500 home will not go up on the adjoining piece of land.

Right there is where dreams are coming true in Grange Vista. H. N. Landon, who is cutting up this property, has placed the building restrictions from $7,500 to $20,000. He has fixed them high, so that the desires along this line of the most exacting, may be fulfilled.

Mr. Landon claims that nowhere in Southern California has the demand for homesites been greater than it has right up against the beautiful Verdugo hills. He says, too, that nowhere has the advance of property values been more consistent than in that charming locality.

Of all the tracts, says Mr. Landon, there is none in the north-west section where dreams are being fulfilled more surely than in Grange Vista. The property is located only two minutes by boulevard from the wonderful Sunset Canyon country club and golf course, and within a stone's throw of the wonderful castle of L. C. Brand.

This property is being subdivided in a de luxe manner. The streets are now in, and along with them came water, gas, electricity, telephone, and an electric street

CASTLE HEIGHTS HAS DANDY VIEW

Have you enjoyed a visit to Castle Heights?

If not, you have something to look forward to—there is a treat in store for you. If you enjoy scenic street lighting system—all of these being underground.

The prices of lots in this tract range from $3,000 to $20,000, and these are being sold on terms of 20 per cent down and 2 per cent per month. A liberal discount will be made for cash and for immediate building.

To get this tract drive north on Central Avenue to Kenneth, west to Grand View, north to Mountain, west to tract.

ery you will be afforded a view of the San Fernando valley that will long remain in your memory. Scenery is something that the prospective home owner is fighting for, he is going to the out of the way places, in many instances, in order that he may get it. From Castle Heights one may secure a magnificent panoramic view of Eagle Rock on the east, to Lankershim on the west, with Glendale in the foreground and the extensive and fertile San Fernando valley in the distance.

Castle Heights is located at the junction of Mountain street and Western Avenue, directly adjoining Brand's castle. It is one block above Tenth street. The lots in this tract are 50x165, 60 x165 and 64x170, and the prices range from $1,750 to $4,000. The terms on these lots are 20 per cent down and 2 per cent per month.

To reach the tract drive out San Fernando road or Kenneth road to Grand View, up Grand View to Brand Castle, and look for our sign on Mountain street, adjoining Brand's Golf course. Orange and black streamers on tract.

WHERE FUR-BEARING ANIMALS ARE FOUND

There is really no one section that has most of all the various fur animals. In Alaska there are some of about all other than skunk, civet cat and opossum; in Nevada, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and other of the Rocky mountain states, there are more coyotes than elsewhere; New England and other of the eastern states have most fox; Southern states most coon, mink and opossum; Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia, Indiana and other central states most skunk. If the inquirer is interested to know what state, or section, has most big game, then parts of Alaska and certain of the Rocky mountain states, but like the fur animals there is no "one locality" that has most of all these animals, including bear, deer, moose, elk and mountain lion.—Sportsman's Digest.

BEAUTIFUL SHERER PARK IS AVAILABLE TO HOMEBUYERS

FOURTEEN DANDY HOMESITES IN TRACT

Demand Is Heavy and the Prices Are Down to Bedrock

After years of waiting the property buyers of Glendale have an opportunity of securing lots in the beautiful holdings of J. C. Sherer, at the corner of Verdugo and Garfield, which are just now being thrown on the market. For years this wonderful property has been the envy of hundreds of home owners in Glendale. They have looked forward to the time when that select piece of realty should be cut into homesites. At last this moment has arrived, and the expected inquiry for sites in this tract is being experienced.

In this tract there are 14 lots, the smallest being 52 by 132 feet in size an ideal size for a modern home-plate. The formal opening date of this tract has been set for September 30, and Harvey C. Patterson, 1330 East Colorado street, who is sales agent for the tract, expects to sell all of them within a week.

"The advance demand and inquiries with regard to this property is extremely encouraging," said Mr. Patterson this morning. "We have a truly wonderful property here and are well aware of this fact. The prices that are being charged for the lots are very reasonable. In fact, we expect they will advance 25 percent or 30 percent before the close of this winter."

A little piece of history in connection with this property is interesting. This land was purchased by J. C. Sherer 43 years ago for $50 per acre, which was at that time considered all the property was worth. However, Mr. Sherer states he does not know how much it has cost him since. Two acres are being retained by Mr. Sherer for a home place. This was planted years and years ago by Mr. Sherer to a large assortment of fruits and is one of the show places of the valley.

EASTERN STAR'S GOLDEN JUBILEE OCTOBER 16-19

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—The order of the Eastern Star, organized in this state in 1873, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its organization with the Golden Jubilee State Convention in this city October 16 to 19. It will be the largest convention ever held by the order in the state, in the fifty years of its existence. Six chapters with a membership of 512 organized the Grand chapters here in 1873. These six original towns were Nevada City, Oakland, Vallejo, Suisun, Aetna Mills and San Francisco. Today there are more than four hundred towns in the states which have chapters with a membership of approximately 55,000.

In order to properly handle the ten thousand delegates and their friends who are coming here for the convention special arrangements have been made to meet every incoming train and steamer for several days prior to the opening of the convention and right up to the actual hour of the sessions. Registration booths will be established at the various hotels which will be occupied by Eastern Star visitors.

SUNSHINE HOMES IS ESTABLISHED TEMPORARILY

Will Soon Have Permanent Location; Glendale Directors

Announcement to the effect that the Sunshine Homes association has opened temporarily and will in the near future establish a permanent home for worthy aged people in Glendale, was made by Mr. O. F. Saunders, secretary-treasurer of the association, who will be in charge of the local institution.

The Sunshine Homes association is a non-sectarian Christian institution, incorporated under the laws of the state of California.

The perpetuity of the association is secured in a board of nine trustees who serve gratuitously and hold in trust all property and funds, none of which can ever be used or appropriated to any personal interest, or willed or deeded to heirs, but must be used exclusively to carry on the work of the association. All of the trustees and officers serve without compensation.

Although the organization is non-sectarian, it is said to be a Christian charity, devoted to the spiritual and material needs of worthy aged people, by providing and maintaining a comfortable home for their care, where they may spend their declining years.

It is the plan and purpose of the association to conduct the institution in such a manner as to make it a real home for all those who choose it as their place of abode.

Since the Sunshine Homes association has become a local institution, at the annual election of trustees and officers held recently, the association chose six of Glendale's leading citizens as members of the board of trustees, as follows: Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Root, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Brown, Mrs. W. E. Pelley, Mrs. Pearl Keller, Mr. O. F. Saunders, formerly of Los Angeles, but now of Glendale. In addition, Miss Nellie E. Karges and Mr. T. B. Kahoe, both of Los Angeles, were elected.

Mrs. F. B. Root was elected president of the association, and Mrs. W. E. Pelley vice-president. Both ladies are well known in Glendale

'SOME' PICTURE IS EDMONT PARK

"To you who are struggling against the tyranny of rent and the heart-breaking hopelessness of making the usual big, first payment on a home, we say—

"Come to Edgemont park—build your home in the cool, green of its wide alfalfa fields or under its great spreading walnut trees—come here where the 'kiddies' will be happy in the freedom from congested, dangerous city streets—where a magnificent school is close by. Come where gas, water and electricity will serve you—where all the streets are graded and some of them have walks and curbs.

"See the model home we have built—only $50 down will supply the rough lumber to build one like it—pay the remainder on easy monthly terms—a few days' work and your home—your own home—is ready for you. When you have made substantial payments on your lot we will finance your fine new home for you.

"The lots are large, the smallest are 45x135. Think of the money you have paid for rent in the past five years—think of the fine home it will build for you. Here is opportunity—your lot—one of the surest, swift profit makers we know of, only 5 minutes from Burbank, 5 minutes from Lankershim and 10 minutes from Hollywood. In the finest section of the San Fernando valley for only $50 down, very easy terms on the balance. The rough lumber for your home only $50 down and easy terms—again we say. Here is opportunity, but you must act NOW before this offer is withdrawn."

Doesn't this picture look good to you? If you are a rent payer—a slave to the landlord this word-view should carry a message of independence that could not go unheeded.

The lots in this tract are 45x135 and 50x150 feet and the prices range from $495 to $1300.

TRAFFIC TRANSMISSION IS 1924 CHANDLER FEATURE

CLASH-PROOF GEARSET MARKS THE FINISH OF "SHIFTING" TROUBLES

Very Latest Feature in Connection With Automobile Construction, Marking Important Advancement Step, Is Feature of Popular Car

SAFETY AND SILENCE OF MOTOR IS ASSURED

Improved Pikes Peak Motor, Beautified Body Styles Are Also Announced, But Notwithstanding These, the Price Remains Unchanged

A transmission that absolutely ends clashing and stripping of gears in changing speed and enables the most inexperienced driver to change instantly from high gear to second or low, regardless of car and engine speed, is the feature of the Chandler Six for 1924, the first announcement of the improved models being made today.

The 1924 Chandler brings important improvements in the Pikes Peak Motor, which has won a foremost place in performance records since it was introduced last January, and enhanced body styles in a great variety of colors. The price remains unchanged.

Masters Traffic Difficulties
Because the new Chandler gear set masters every difficulty that city traffic can develop, it has been named the "Traffic Transmission." Like the Pikes Peak motor, it is built in its entirety at the Chandler factory, licensed under the Campbell patents.

Nothing could arouse greater enthusiasm among motorists than the announcement that the transmission at last has been perfected. This is the one unit of the automobile that has remained unchanged since the first gasoline-propelled vehicles were produced, although it was the unit that most needed improvement.

It is generally admitted that the shifting of gears is the most difficult operation that a driver must perform. It is particularly a hardship for women, but even the most experienced occasionally clashes gears in shifting, while the number of drivers skillful enough to shift infallibly from high gear into second while going at good speed is extremely small.

New Driving Elements Possible
The Chandler engineers assert flatly that the Traffic Transmission not only makes gear changing as easy as steering, but that it introduces new elements of safety, convenience and comfort in motoring.
Chief of the advantages of the new unit is its availability in emergencies. In descending a steep hill, the safest way to keep the car under control is to have the car in gear, either in second or low. Most drivers know this, yet this expedient cannot be used unless the transmission is perfect.

MAY USE PRESENT LENS UNTIL DEC. 31

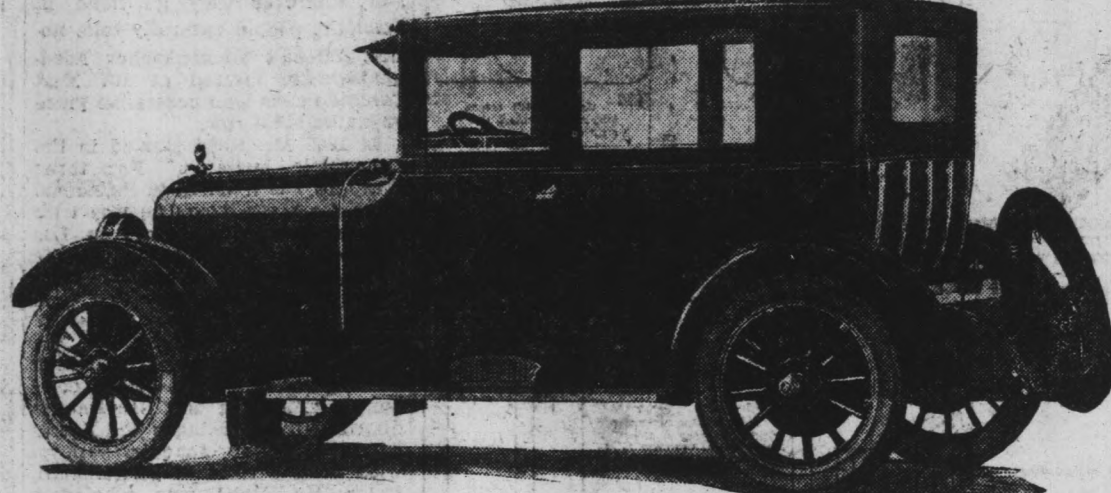

Burt Roberts, executive secretary of the Motor Car Dealers' association, has sent the following bulletin to members:

"From queries received at the Division of Motor Vehicles in reference to the light provisions of the new motor vehicle act, it is apparent, according to Will H. Marsh, chief of the division, that there is a great misunderstanding on the part of the general public as to its full purport. Under the terms of the new measure present equipment, i. e., lens and lighting apparatus now in use on vehicles of whatever character is exempt, and it is unnecessary to change the same until December 31, 1923. However, should a lens now in use on an old equipment become broken, it will be unlawful to re-equip the light so damaged with an unlawful lens.
"Dealers in lens are expressly prohibited from selling any lens not approved under the requirements of the new law effective September 1.
"It is not permissible for headlight adjusting stations to replace burned out lens with those of an excessive candlepower.
"Lists of the approved devices will be filed with county clerks, law enforcement agencies and with the official adjusting stations certified by the department."

MIXING YOUR OWN POLISH

In this day when body polishes are not expensive it is hardly advisable for the average motorist to go to the trouble of mixing his own. It is possible, however, that the car owner has a liking for a polish, the contents of which are not generally known. If so, the resultant polish might pay for the trouble of mixing. The fellow who does not care to take a chance with cheap polishes may find a good brightener in the following mixture: To one gallon of turpentine add one pint of paraffin oil, three and a half ounces of citronella, one and one-half ounces of oil of cedar.

NEW CHANDLER CHUMMY SEDAN FOR 1924

This distinctive model will easily maintain its lead as the most popular of the Chandler closed cars. Its roomy interior is beautifully finished, and is easy of access through the two wide doors. With its Pikes Peak motor, the Chummy Sedan is endowed with qualities of dash and go seldom associated with closed cars. The Traffic transmission (Campbell patents), Chandler's exclusive new gearset that is clash-proof, will make it even more popular. Because the average driver meets with the severest of tests of ability while driving in distracting traffic congestion, the new transmission is called the Traffic, as it challenges any condition of driving.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS ARE RESCUED BY AUTOS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Automobiles proved their worth as individual units of transportation in the terrific series of fires that swept Northern California cities and counties in the last week.

Cars and trucks carried household belongings, fire fighters and explosives that were used to check the flames when water supplies failed. Many Berkeley people owe their lives to the fact that automobiles carried them and their belongings from the flames which swept out the fashionable section of the city in three hours.

Firefighters were rushed to the hills back of Oakland and in Marin County to check forest and grass fires which had reached menacing proportions. Just another proof that the world would be a far different place if individual motor transportation were suddenly eliminated.

A loose windshield which causes annoying rattles, can be securely held in place by filling the space in the frame with shellac. This can be applied with a sharp-pointed stick or a brush, and should be applied slowly so that it will pack tightly in the opening.

MOTORISTS PAY

The question is often raised by car owners as to whether their insurance applies if their car is stolen when they have neglected to lock it. A number of motorists are always wondering whether it voids the insurance to leave a car stand out all night. Others ask, "What if the car is stolen from a garage where the owner does not use the lock on account of preventing the car from being moved in event of fire?"
The answer to these queries is an emphatic but subtle "yes." The insurance companies invariably pay the claims, but the car owners pay for their negligence. These unnecessary losses are reflected in the high rates which all must pay.

ELIMINATING BODY SQUEAKS

Body squeaks are a bug bear to the motorist. Few cars are without them. They creep in regardless of the carelessness or attention given by the auto owner.

In trying to remove the squeaks from the car it is a good plan to release the body bolts and back them up with grease. When the bolts are retightened, the grease will work around them, thereby eliminating any chance of annoying noise.

It is claimed that if, before washing the car, the owner will force a mixture of kerosene and lubricating oil between the body crevices, using a squirt gun or a brush, the squeaks will disappear, providing the bolts are pulled down properly. Standing on the running board and rocking the car will assist the oil in getting in between the joints.

L. A. STOP RULES TOLD BY CLUB

Exactly how the new "boulevard stop" ordinance works in Los Angeles has been outlined for motorists by the Touring Bureau of the Auto Club of Southern California. Many motorists have expressed a confused idea, it is reported, as to the requirements of this ordinance. By following the advice given by the club, there should be no confusion.

At the present time only three boulevards are included in the list of "stops." These are Wilshire boulevard from Park View street to the westerly city limits; Mission road from Aliso street to Alhambra avenue, and Figueroa street from Washington south to Manchester avenue. All autos arriving at these boulevards from any side of the street, must come to a complete stop, it is pointed out, before proceeding into or across the boulevard. This stop is made on a line with the sidewalk. Where there is a traffic officer on duty at the intersection, the motorist should follow the signal given by the officer and proceed as usual under his direction. It is not necessary to stop when a crossing officer is on duty other than according to his signal.

The time to remain at a full stop is only necessitated by the action of coming to a stop and starting again. There is no need of waiting at a full stop unless passing traffic requires a wait for safety purposes. As the ordinance is designed to prevent accidents occasioned by motorists plunging into boulevard traffic from some side street without stopping to see if the way is clear.

down properly. Standing on the running board and rocking the car will assist the oil in getting in between the joints.

Legislation against the glaring headlight, the spread of education in the rural districts brought about by good roads in those sections, and the "saturation point" with regard to purchasing of automobiles by the American people are three points that are taken up for discussion by the National Highways association this week.

"Legislation against the glaring headlight fiend," says the motorist. But legislation doesn't cure the evils of glare, mainly because the law which cuts down the glare so it is "safe" also cut down the light so much that its use is unsafe.

Mr. Reed has purchased the business of Arthur M. Schoffner, 107 E. Colorado Blvd. (phone 261-R), and has gathered around him an organization of experienced and capable men, all of whom I personally know to be highly efficient and trustworthy.

As for Mr. Reed himself, I have no hesitation in saying that to know him and transact business with him would be an experience to be pleasantly remembered by any person capable of appreciating a man of his exceptionally sterling character, ability and experience.

Sincerely,
LEON T. SHETTLER.

MAXWELL SPORT L-HEAD MOTORS IS NOW IN GLENDALE ARE MAKING GOOD

The first Maxwell Special Sport car was received this week by the Glendale Motor company, Maxwell-halmers dealers at 124 West Colorado street. It has created quite a sensation on automobile row. Its new color sets off the beautiful lines of this car and quickly attracts attention to it. It is unusual well finished with deep leather upholstery and high back cushions, and the surprise to everyone is the amount of room there is in the car.

The Special Sport does not take the place of the Standard Sport but is an addition to the line, using the same chassis. This makes the line so complete as to satisfy the most particular buyer.

The Maxwell is now universally recognized as the world's greatest motor value. At the new low price it is thrust far to the front in its quality class and as an example of value it is the wonder of the industry, says Mr. Clark.

TWO AUTOMOBILE PARKING POINTERS

When the car is left-parked with the rear to the curb, and where boys are likely to be tempted to make the spare tire valve cap for their bikes, remove the cap and make it with you. It isn't the cost of these things but the nuisance of finding that there isn't any air in the spare when you go to change a tire. If you remember to attach the cap again when returning to the car the amount of air that leaks out in the interim will be negligible.

To park the car at an angle to the curb in such a way that the machine is near enough without actually resting on the right front tire it is only necessary to drive up slowly until the machine touches the curb and then back off a couple of inches before setting the brakes.

OWN MOTORIST WANTS:
Better traffic regulations, not necessarily uniformity.
Simplified routes through cities avoiding traffic for tourists who are not stopping off.
Signposts in cities to lead motorists back to main through routes after a stop to dine, to shop, to wait or to look about.
More convenient entrances to hotels.
Parking regulations that make for the accommodation of more cars; not restrictive measures.

Intersection Traffic Laws Are Explained

In order to make clear certain provisions of the California Vehicle Act which went into effect September 1, the legal department of the Auto Club of Southern California has issued official diagrams explaining the right of way provision, the "passing" provision; proper method of turning; and exceptions to the right of way rule.

While these diagrams have been included in the little booklet also issued by the club, certain of them have been issued so that the general motorist public can be well acquainted with them. Every motorist is urged to study the diagram, as they are to be rigidly enforced throughout the state.

Other features of the Vehicle Act of which auto owners are in doubt will be explained by the Auto club at any of its branch offices upon application. The Glendale office at 248 South Brand boulevard is in receipt of a complete stock of copies of the new Motor Vehicle Act.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENTS SHOW SLIGHT DECLINE

Grade crossing casualties reportable to the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Southern Pacific lines were reduced 12.4 per cent per 1,000,000 locomotive miles during the first half of 1923, as compared with 1922, it was announced today.

This reduction in casualties, it was pointed out, is the more significant due to an increase during the year of about 27 per cent in the number of registered automobiles and trucks and a large increase in the number of non-resident automobiles touring the Pacific Coast.

Southern Pacific reports show that on June 30, 1922, registered automobiles and trucks in the six states traversed by its lines totaled 939,287 while on the same date this year the total was 1,110,178, an increase of 280,891 or 27.7 per cent.

Records of the State Motor Vehicle Department show that on August 1 of this year there were 40,000 non-resident automobiles in California alone, a substantial increase over the number last year. While attesting the growing popularity of California in tourist travel, this nevertheless reflects a proportional increase in accident potentiality.

In commenting on the gratifying results of the campaign to reduce crossing accidents, R. J. Clancy, assistant to general manager, said: "This result was achieved through splendid educational work by the press, schools, churches, automobile associations, Southern Pacific's safety organization and employees, especially those in engine and train service. By practically all such agencies efforts were directed to education of automobile drivers in safe practices when approaching or crossing railroad tracks.

"Careless driving, however, while proportionately reduced as regards accidents per locomotive mile, or accidents per 1,000 registered automobiles correlated to locomotive miles, still obtains in a degree, which urgently appeals to all agencies of education and prevention for continuous effort.

"In the first half of this year 25 people were killed and 58 injured from trying to beat trains at crossings. Three were killed and 22 injured by running into trains, largely because of approaching crossing at a speed above braking power of machine or because of defective brakes. Three were killed

REED IS AT HEAD OF RICKENBACHER AGENCY

The Rickenbacher bark in Glendale has a new pilot—there is a new man at the tiller. He is a fellow who has been pilot of automobile sales and service ships for the past 18 years and he knows how to turn the trick. Lewis F. Reed, a resident of Eagle Rock, is now on the job, and he is determined to map out for his car one of the most successful careers imaginable.

Reed claims that Glendale and the "Rick" are thoroughbreds. They travel well in double harness and wherever they go hand in hand the people naturally take notice. Reed's Rickenbacher headquarters is located at 107 East Colorado street, an accessible place on automobile row.

In 1905 Mr. Reed started in the automobile business. For three years he was a dealer in Pasadena. Then for seven years he was with various large distributors in Los Angeles. In 1915 he joined the forces of the Earl C. Anthony company, dealers for the Reo and Packard in Los Angeles. Later he was wholesale manager for the same firm in Fresno, after which he was put in charge of the company's affairs in the Sacramento district, which includes the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, with headquarters at Sacramento. Later Mr. Reed was wholesale sales manager for the Anthony company in the Fresno territory, which included 47 of the northern counties.

On April 1, 1922, Mr. Reed severed his connections with the Anthony company and became associated with the Leon T. Shettler company, distributors for the Rickenbacher car in Southern California. He occupied the position as wholesale sales manager. He remained with the Shettler company for 19 months, during which time he took care of the selling of the "Rick."

For years Mr. Reed has had a "hankerin'" to go into business for himself. The other positions he has held have been all right in their way, but somehow they did not fill the bill. He wanted to be his own boss and in every detail paddle his own canoe, as they say. Sutting action to the word he bought out A. M. Schottner, acquiring at the same time the Rickenbacher selling rights in Glendale, Burbank, Eagle Rock and Tulare. In addition to owning the Glendale Rickenbacher agency Mr. Reed retains his interest in the Leon T. Shettler company in Los Angeles.

Mr. Reed took hold of the reins here last Monday morning. In addition to putting his own efforts in the business he will employ the services of several capable assistants, in both the sales and the service end of the business.

There is "Jimmy" Zimmerman, formerly first technical service man for Leon T. Shettler, who has charge of the mechanical part of the local business. The sales manager is Fred Vansickle, who has had 20 years' experience in the automobile selling business, having been with the Reo at Fresno. J. Baker, salesman, has a wide knowledge of the cars that are on the market today, especially the Rickenbacher.

Genuine service, courtesy and fair dealing are the features on which Mr. Reed will build his business.

"I'm not an inexperienced fly-by-night," said Mr. Reed this morning. "I know all phases of the automobile business and I'm here to stay. My business will be built on the firm foundation of truth, honesty and integrity. I know I have the car. It sells itself."

and two injured as a result of automobile stalling on track due to attempt of driver to shift gear when on or close to tracks.

"Drivers approaching a crossing on highways parallel with the track should be particularly watchful as it is more difficult to see trains traveling in the same direction as the automobile and should never approach a crossing above controllable speed. A passenger train one-quarter of a mile from the crossing is over the crossing in less than thirty seconds and drivers of automobiles can employ this time to no better advantage than to wait and let it pass.

CLASH-PROOF TRAFFIC TRANSMISSION FEATURES 1924 CHANDLERS

The Chandler announces that its 1924 models are equipped with the exclusive Traffic transmission (Campbell patents), of which a cut-away view is shown here. The transmission is clash-proof, and gears may be changed either up or down, at any speed, in an instant. Its control is exactly the same as that of the old-fashioned sliding-gear transmission. In operation, however, the gears are not shifted, so that clashing and grinding cannot occur. All gears remain constantly in mesh; the movement of the change-speed lever instantaneously selects the desired gear and locks it, by means of keys, to the shaft, while all the other gears remain free of the shaft. The Traffic transmission is announced as the greatest improvement in automobiles since the advent of the self-starter. The name was chosen because the new unit challenges any condition of traffic driving.

less the necessity for it is foreseen before the descent is begun, as once the car attains any considerable speed, it is impossible with the ordinary transmission to change to a lower gear. Then, if the brakes fail to hold, or burn out, the descent is uncontrolled. With the Traffic Transmission, however, second or low speed gears may be thrown in action at any time, effectively holding the car.

Gears Cannot Clash
Clashing or grinding of gears, with the consequent chipping or stripping of the gear teeth, cannot occur with the new transmission because the gears are always in mesh. The change of speed is effected by causing any desired gear to take hold of the shaft, and this action is obtained by moving the gear shift lever exactly as heretofore. The change is made silently, positively, and as quickly as one can operate the shifting lever.

It is predicted that women drivers particularly will appreciate the Traffic Transmission, as "shifting" is no longer a matter of practice, skill, or strength.

Pikes Peak Motor Improved
The principal improvement in the famous Pikes Peak motor announced by Chandler consists of a change in the oiling system, which is now entirely a pressure feed. The change has a notable silencing effect on the connecting rods now operate against a cushioning film of oil under high pressure, and vibrations are deadened. Increased power is gained, with longer life for the bearings. Other changes are mainly slight modifications in design to effect greater silence, power, and smoothness, or to provide for easier maintenance by the owner driver.

Though all Chandler bodies were brand new last January, the 1924 line has been considerably improved in appearance. The characteristic Chandler lines remain the same, but a few deft touches have greatly enhanced their beauty. The distinguishing mark of the 1924 model is a polished aluminum bead between the cowl and the hood. The bead is attached to the cowl, and besides adding to the looks of the car it serves as protection to the body finish when the hood is raised and lowered.

New Colors Available
It is in the colors and striping that the newest effects are to be seen. Besides those two dark colors that have been standard during the present year, the purchaser is given the option of additional colors for almost any model. The colors now used are dark blue, dark green, maroon, light blue, red, and light green. Each model now has distinctive striping in gold.

All models have been continued. The closed cars include the limousine and three sedans—the Chummy, two-door five passenger; Metropolitan, four-door, five passenger; and the seven passenger sedan. The open cars are the four passenger roadster, the four passenger Royal Dispatch, sports model; and two touring cars, five passenger and seven passenger.

The Traffic Transmission, despite its revolutionary advance in automotive construction, makes no difference in the appearance of the cars, and no difference in the manner of shifting gears. In fact, were a driver to start off in one of the new Chandlers without any knowledge that the new device had been adopted, he would note no difference except the extraordinary ease with which he can change gears.

At a standstill, there is no such thing as the trouble often heretofore met with in getting low or reverse gears to mesh in order to start the car. Any gear can be engaged at a standstill without having to feel one's way in. Were this device in general use, many railroad crossing accidents might be averted; there have been many fatalities because the driver either stalled trying to cross the tracks in high rather than risk missing a shift, or because he failed to get into lower gear in time.

Safety on Hill
Ascending a steep hill, second gear should be depended on to insure a quicker climb and to relieve the strain on the entire car, yet drivers hesitate to attempt to get into second gear, fearing that the car will lose all its momentum during the shift. With the Traffic

CHEV MAKES GOOD CROSS-COUNTRY RECORD

After thirty-three days of grueling travel in which they battled rain and mud, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Davis, and son, spanned the distance between Newark, N. J., and Glendale, tired, but happy to be in Glendale, and over-enthusiastic over the sturdy never-give-up qualities of the trusty Chevrolet. In Arizona, New Mexico and Missouri floods were encountered, and the party was greatly delayed in all the country west of Ohio. At one time the members of the party were stuck in the mud all night and had to sleep in the automobile. The start from the eastern city was made on August 22, and the arrival in Glendale occurred on September 24.

During the entire trip the party averaged better than 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline. During a single day in Kansas the party traveled 204 miles, making 30 miles to the gallon of gasoline. Over the Raton Pass in high gear went the "Chevie," with the exception of one point where the party had to slow up to pass another car.

The members of the party were present when Ray Patterson tried to spin across the Colorado river. They say he dove into the stream and on account of the strong current could not rise to the surface. He was never seen again alive. Two hours later his body was recovered six miles down stream.

Mr. Davis states that several times during the trip across country the car was in water up to the radiator, but the old boat went plowing ahead. Difficulties too numerous to mention were overcome by the party, all of which makes them more ardent enthusiasts for the Chevrolet.

The Chevrolet is handled in Glendale by C. L. Smith, corner Orange and Colorado, who related the above story to a Press reporter this week.

TO START A CAR CORRECTLY

Every operator of an automobile should exercise care when starting a car. The spark should be retarded, the gas not advanced too far, and the minute the starter has made the engine take hold, the starter should be released. Be careful not to have the engine turning over too fast when letting it clutch. This causes a jerky start which throws a strain on the running gear and a natural reactive strain on the engine. Gather momentum slowly. Do not attempt to jump the car ahead from a start to 50 miles an hour in two or three seconds. The gasoline engine is certainly flexible and certainly built to go from slow speeds to high speeds in an instant's notice; but remember that while an engine alone can do this, the minute it is loaded it has to carry that load along and that puts strains on the engine that are destructive. Go into second then to high gradually.

Transmission, the lever can be snapped from high to second so quickly that there is virtually no interruption in the power applied to the rear wheels.

The Traffic Transmission is not in the least similar to any other device, such as mechanical gear shifts, which move sliding gears of the ordinary transmission by mechanical power.

It is remarkable that the improvement has been attained so simply. In the old transmission, the gears were free to slide along the shaft, but the shaft was squared or grooved so that the gears always turned with it. In the Traffic Transmission, the arrangement is reversed. The gears are always in mesh, and do not slide lengthwise on the shaft, but the shaft is left free to turn within the gears. Any desired gear is thrown into operation by the shifting lever, which locks the selected gear wheel to the shaft, causing the latter to revolve.

RECORD UP PIKES PEAK IS BROKEN

Roaring to a spectacular finish at an average speed of 40 miles per hour, Glen Shultz, of Colorado Springs, piloted his Essex Special to victory in the annual Pike's Peak hill climb, according to reports received by the Kelly Motor company, 230 North Brand, local Essex dealer.

In addition to the Penrose Trophy, Shultz pocketed a $500 prize awarded him as winner of class one. This class is limited to cars of 133 inches or less of piston displacement and a weight of more than 1600 pounds. The Essex covered the 13 miles 2200 feet in less time than any other car in the race, and came within 22.9 seconds of equalling the record for the course set by Ralph Mulford in a Hudson Super-Six in 1916. Shultz's time was 18 minutes 27.35 seconds, the next best time being 19:21 2-5. The course was in fine shape, and the crowd, numbering over 5000, was pitched to the highest point of excitement.

The Essex went into "Bottomless Pit" traveling at the rate of 67 miles per hour and came out at 50. It was one of the most daring exhibitions of skill ever witnessed.

When it is considered that the average grade is 7 per cent and at times runs up to 10 1/2 per cent, some idea of the strain on the motor and chassis may be had. Taking turns on two wheels and skidding to within a few inches of the edge of the road overlooking 2000 feet of sheer drop, are incidents experienced by the successful driver.

From the watering tank, the course is all "up hill," and rises from an elevation of 9500 feet to 14,109 feet above sea level. This is a total vertical distance of 4,600 feet, which puts more of a strain on the car in 18 minutes than is experienced in months of ordinary touring by the average car.

DOGS ASSIST POLICE

To ascertain the number of dogs in Vienna a census was taken, and at the final check-up the canines numbered 73,000. This has been a big increase as the last count only showed about half this number. Due to numerous burglaries and thefts the dogs have become more popular than ever and many families have them in their possession for protection's sake. At the Central cemetery, where many bodies were stolen, police dogs in company with guards, are used to stamp out the thieves.—Sportsman's Digest.

WHEN BRAKES SLIP

A slipping brake is sometimes caused by oil which has found its way out of the rear axle assembly and come in contact with the brake bands. This oil can be removed by washing with gasoline, and if this does not eliminate the slipping, the trouble can usually be overcome by applying a little Fuller's earth to the lining. Wear of the lining will also cause slipping and if the wear is not great enough to warrant relining the band, the brake can be adjusted.

Announcing~The Greatest Advance since the Self Starter

TRAFFIC TRANSMISSION an exclusive feature of the 1924 CHANDLER

Easiest and Safest Car to Drive

AS the feature of its 1924 models, Chandler presents the biggest advance in motor car construction since the self-starter—the Traffic Transmission.

The starter overcame the evils of cranking. The Traffic Transmission does away with the terrors of shifting gears, eliminating completely the great trial of motoring—the difficulties of maneuvering through congested city traffic.

A totally new principle is involved. Its first appearance on passenger cars is made in the 1924 Chandler. So sound are its fundamentals that it seems destined for general adoption. For the present, however, only Chandler owners can enjoy the unusual delight it gives to driving. It is built complete in the Chandler plant.

Many manufacturers would have been content to give the public, in any one year, the

Pikes Peak Motor

But Chandler now adds to its triumphs the Traffic Transmission so that even the most inexperienced and timorous driver may fully enjoy the masterly performance powers of the motor which so rapidly won America's respect and admiration.

In the 1924 Chandler, the Pikes Peak Motor remains essentially unchanged, save for an important improvement in the oiling system and certain refinements that make its operation flawlessly smooth and noiseless. These changes are based on the experience of thousands of users, many of whom have driven Chandler cars with Pikes Peak Motors 15000, 18000, and 20000 miles, since January last.

All those who have vainly battled with the perplexities and noise of the old-fashioned gear shift, will naturally want

Change at Any Speed
Gears Cannot Clash
Anybody Can Do It
Safest Brake on Hills
Nothing New to Learn to test for themselves the amazing improvement in driving convenience provided by the Traffic Transmission.

At all speeds in the normal driving range, whether going up hill or down, the change is made without clashing or grinding, and with perfect safety and surety.

For braking purposes it is possible to change from high gear back to second at 35 miles an hour, and from second to low when occasion arises. No dexterity, experience or practice is necessary. Anyone can do it the first time—and with the pressure of the little finger on the gear shift lever.

Gone forever is the uncertainty of shifting gears and its attendant danger on hills and in heavy traffic. Thousands who have been kept from the driver's seat by the perplexities of the old transmission can now become happy motorists.

The Traffic Transmission insures a positive, silent, instantaneous change under every condition because its construction eliminates the fundamental fault of the old transmission—that of trying to mesh two gears that are spinning at different speeds. The gears of the Traffic Transmission are always in mesh. Their teeth, instead of being chipped and shattered by unsuccessful shifts, actually improve with service.

Silence Despite Power

With the revolutionary Traffic Transmission, the improved and practically noiseless Pikes Peak Motor, the long-lived Chandler chassis with its rugged rear axle, its efficient brakes and feather-weight steering, with handsome comfortable bodies and at record prices—the 1924 Chandler offers value without precedent.

Do not fail to see it! Do not fail to drive it!

"BIGGEST THING IN MOTORDOM" IS NEW OLDS SIX

New Oldsmobile is admired. Many place orders for new car. Mr. Hunter, local distributor, sees big business ahead.

THE PRICE IN GLENDALE LESS THAN $900

Will Make 20-25 Miles Per Gallon of Gasoline—800-1,000 Per Quart of Oil, Which is Real Economy—In Appearance the Machine is a World Beater

"The biggest thing in motordom," is the way C. H. Hunter, local dealer for the Oldsmobile, characterizes the new 6-cylinder car that is just being announced by Olds company, and which is now being explained in detail by Mr. Hunter.

"And, believe me," said Mr. Hunter this morning, "that characterization is putting it mildly, for this new bus is the biggest triumph any automobile manufacturing company has been able to 'put over' for many a year. It's a knockout in the true sense of the word.

"Think of a snappy-looking six, with standard units throughout, selling in Glendale for less than $900! Can you beat it? I'll say you can't, no matter where you go or how hard you try. It is the last word in automobile construction new car and he is more than willing to explain the details of this "winner" model.

Of this new car Mr. Hunter has the following to say: "An entirely new automobile, in a new price class, has been created for the American public. This new car is of the six-cylinder type with six body styles, at a price range between approximately $750 and $1100.

"The various body types of this lowest-priced six-cylinder line will consist of a five passenger touring car; two passenger roadster; a five-passenger sport touring; a two-passenger cab, a closed car designed especially for business use; a four-passenger coupe and a five-passenger sedan. An unusual feature of all these models is their extreme easy riding qualities. It is literally impossible to throw any one from the seat on the roughest roads.

"The company says the car was designed to meet the long felt need of a six-cylinder automobile at a price within the reach of everyone. Only through the co-operation of the engineering staff and the great resources, purchasing and manufacturing facilities of the General Motors corporation could such a car be produced at such a low price.

"The stream line body effect with high hood and cowl has been followed by the designers. The car has a wheelbase of 110 inches with an engine that develops more than 42 horsepower by actual test. The engine is of the removable "L" type. The valves are unusually large, being 1 1/2 inches in diameter, creating great efficiency. The valve lifters are of the mushroom type, designed to distribute wear evenly. Valve guides and the entire valve lifter assembly are exposed to a constant oil mist from the crankcase, insuring quiet operation.

"The cylinder block and crankshaft is balanced two ways, both statically and dynamically, and has three large bronze-backed, interchangeable Chadwick bearings, as perfected for Liberty aircraft engines.

"All the latest improvements and developments brought out during the last few years both by automotive engineers in this country and abroad, have been incorporated in the new Oldsmobile six. The engine has three-point suspension, and is of the high efficiency type, operating smoothly and quietly at all speeds, with a quick pick-up in traffic.

"The oiling system is unusually efficient; the three camshaft bearings, three main bearings and the six connecting rod bearings, as well as the timing gears, are lubricated by oil under regulated pressure from a gear type pump. Perfect cooling at all speeds is provided by a large capacity Harrison honeycomb radiator and pump circulation.

"The pistons are of grey iron of special design, ground on sides and top. Three well fitted piston rings give perfect compression. The cylinder walls are given a glass like finish by an automatic "honing" process. The combustion chamber, entirely in the cylinder head, is dome shaped—the latest development in engine design—insuring efficient fuel mixture, resulting in great economy in gasoline. The intake manifold, provides a sure method of heating the fuel before it enters the cylinders. A vacuum feed system is used.

"The engine has a displacement of 169.3 cubic inches and develops over 42 horsepower by actual test. This power combined with a correct axle ratio gives great pulling and hill climbing ability.

"A gallon of gasoline will give from 20 to 25 miles, and a gallon of oil from 800 to 1000 miles.

"The chassis of the car is built exceptionally rugged with a frame 51-2 inches deep and with four strong cross members. The popular type of Hotchkiss drive is employed. The power shaft has been fitted through a propeller shaft having two flexible, fabric universal joints of latest design. Back lash, noises and rattles are eliminated. This type of universal joint is extremely long-lived and the necessity for the lubrication of such inaccessible parts is done away with. The chassis is lubricated by the Alemite pressure system.

"The rear axle is of the one piece type, insuring maximum strength without undue weight.

"Delco electrical equipment for both starting and lighting is used, with a six volt Willard storage battery. Flat Lite reflectors, legal in every state, are used, eliminating need of special lenses. Extremely easy steering is achieved through the design of the front axle and the steering mechanism. The turning radius is 18 feet, an important feature in city driving and parking.

"Both front and rear springs are semi-elliptic, the rear springs being underlung, placing the center of gravity near the road, providing unusual roadability at high speeds. Rear springs are 50.3-4 inches long, while the front springs are 36 inches long.

"The bodies for this new six-cylinder line are made by the Fisher Body corporation. The open models are finished in black baked enamel. The seats are unusually deep and roomy, and there is plenty of leg room in both the front and rear compartments. Snug fitting curtains are provided, and open with all doors. One-piece

GET READY FOR 'CAD' COMPANY THE RAINS—WARNING ENTERTAINS STUDENTS

Now that the "rainy season," is approaching, California motorists are beginning to overhaul their storm curtains; and in many cases they are wondering why improvements in automobile side curtains have not kept pace with improvements in other parts of the car.

In this connection it will be of interest to note what James H. French, of Bartlett & French, Hupmobile dealers at 111 West Harvard street, says about the improvements made in the curtains of the open models of the new Hupmobile R-12.

"In manufacturing them," declares Mr. French, "the curtain lights are enclosed in a rigid metal frame, protecting the lights from being scratched or cracked as the curtains are put on or taken off the car. The unique metal frame surrounding the light on all four sides also makes the entire curtain much stiffer, consequently much easier to handle, both in removing or installing. The metal frame also assists in retaining the original perfect snug fit of the curtains. It makes them practically weather proof over a long period of usage.

"Of equal importance to close fitting curtains is the question of their storage. In the touring models, a compartment in the back of the front seat has been provided, where the curtains remain flat in their frames, do not chafe each other, and are ready for instant use.

"Another valuable feature is that curtain fasteners are so placed that they allow all curtains to be put in position quickly from inside the car. This is especially important in the event of sudden storms."

Worth Remembering

Your fan belt keeps getting loose because you keep tightening it too much. Give a new belt a good stretching before attaching it. A week later it may need to be taken up a little, but just a little. Then more trouble has resulted from belts that are too tight than from those too loose, because the tight belt either becomes loose again or breaks.

In some engines there is a plug at the front end of the engine base which, when removed, offers a means of cleaning out the oil distributor pipe should it become clogged. Whether the pump is attached front or rear its removal also furnishes a means of cleaning the pipe. Remember, stoppage in the distributor pipe is usually indicated by the registering of excessive oil pressure on the gauge when conditions should be normal.

Don't be alarmed if the indicator of the oil pressure gauge should flicker when the car is descending a long steep grade. It merely means that the oil being forward in the crankcase is not reaching the pump in sufficient quantities. It's a warning to buy more oil, though there is no immediate danger in lubrication trouble while the engine is loafing.

Crown fenders are used on all body types.

"The closed models are painted a maroon color, and are trimmed in striped velours. Fittings usually found in only higher priced closed cars are included as standard equipment. The equipment includes a heater, dome light, robe rail, cowl ventilator, two piece ventilating windshield, door locks, transmission lock and sun visor.

"Not a part of the car has been so designed that it is not possible to service it easily. In the case of the brakes, the part of a car which requires attention under varying condition, every effort has been made to make the adjustments most easy. The rods connecting the foot brake pedal with the rear wheel bands have been built outside the frame of the car so that they are accessible without crawling beneath the chassis. The emergency brake is available by simply taking up one floor board in the front compartment.

"The executives of the Olds Motor Works believe they have accomplished the aim of the majority of the automobile manufacturers of the country in putting out a six-cylinder car at a price which will appeal to every car owner. These cars are now on exhibition in all sections of the country.

The systematic study of business as a part of the curricula of our colleges and universities, is one of the latest developments in our educational system. Yet so far has it already progressed that students from various universities are making tours of the country, using the great industrial plants as their laboratories for further research.

A group of fifteen students and post-graduates of the Harvard School of Business Administration were recently guests of the Cadillac Motor Car company, where they were taken on a trip of inspection to study production methods in the factory.

H. H. Rice, Cadillac president, gave them a short talk upon the value of charts and records showing the state of fundamental business conditions and giving data upon which to forecast future tendencies.

Mr. Rice warned the students that theoretical knowledge must be tempered by years of business experience before it becomes of the greatest practical value, citing various forecasts of a slowing down in the automobile business, all of which have failed to materialize.

"You can 'prove' what is going to happen in business, and then find out that you are wrong," said Mr. Rice. "So after the general theory has been worked out it must be put to the test of conditions which may exist in a particular industry and even in a particular unit of that industry."

"The motor car industry, for instance, has been the last to fall away in the several setbacks of general business since the motor industry was born and it has also been the first to recover; which condition demonstrates that it is a growing and expanding business."

The Harvard students of business are making their tour in a special railroad car, and were met at the station by members of the Cadillac organization who brought them to the factory. After leaving Detroit, their next objective was the Eastman Kodak company at Rochester, N. Y.

The party was in charge of Dr. J. O. Downey, who had recently completed the course now being taken by the embryo executives. The Cadillac is handled in Glendale by the Court Motor company, 235 South Brand.

Says Old Mechanic—

"If motorists clearly understood what is meant by 'critical speed,' when it occurs and why, there would be less damage to engines because of vibration and a lot less complainin' about vibration and knockin'.

"Unless a motor is perfectly balanced for all speeds—and this is rare for the reason that balance depends upon design as well as the actual workmanship on the engine—there are bound to be certain parts which vibrate at certain definite rates. The action of the pistons, for example, may give the crankshaft a certain rate of vibration so that it actually springs at the center or at its ends. The action of the pistons are in themselves a source of vibration, but so long as the pistons and the shaft do not beat at the same time the driver is likely to run along thinkin' his engine runs like a dream.

"But when the car reaches a certain speed the two forces of vibration operate in unison, increasing the vibration to a point where the driver suddenly decides the engine is goin' to fall apart. If the power plant is of better design, or in better condition, this unison vibration may simply have the effect of a heavy beat or a rattlin' of the horn or any other unit attached to the engine block.

"In any case the sudden vibration is evidence that the critical speed has been reached, and the driver should immediately slow down or speed up. A change in speed will break up the combination of vibrations, stop the poundin', shakin' or rattlin' and prevent excessive wear on the engine parts.

"And don't forget that the critical speed isn't necessarily constant. It is likely to occur at a lower car speed on hills, with temperature and engine condition causing it to vary somewhat."
